Celebrate Native Culture

More than 1,000 people from all over the Northwest are expected to attend Portland Community College's "Wacipi" ("They dance") Winter Powwow to celebrate Native American culture and tradition.

The free event is open to the community, from noon to 9 p.m., Saturday, Jan. 19, in the Health Technology Building on the PCC Sylvania campus, 12000 S.W. 49th Ave.

There will be drum groups and dancers from across the region, Native American crafts and food, activities for children, and raffle prizes. Other attractions include grand entries at 1 p.m. and 7 p.m., a college fair from noon to 4 p.m. and a free community dinner at 5:30 p.m.

Bob Tom of the Confederated Tribes of Siletz and Grand Ronde will serve as master of ceremonies,

Ed Goodell (also with the Confederated Tribes of Siletz) is the whip man and the Northwest Indian Veterans Association is once again the powwow's color guard.

Proceeds from the Winter Powwow support the college's Native American Student Scholarship, which helps to increase access and retention of Native American students.

Love Lost and Found Again

Portland's improv theater group The Unscriptables presents "The Uninvited: Tennessee Williams with Zombies," an alternate history of the playwright's American south with zombies.

In the late 1930's a strange comet flew over the skies of the Earth, and nothing was ever the same again. Many people died, but unfortunately not all of them stayed that way. There was the initial panic, but now, almost 10 years later, they are trying to find their place in a world that doesn't want them.

The Uninvited is an episodic show, so events from previous performances help shape the story as a whole. Every episode begins with a "previously seen" section.

Performances are now playing each Saturday through Feb. 16 at 8 p.m. and the Funhouse Lounge, 2432 S.E. 11th Ave. All shows are "pay what you want" with a suggested ticket price of $10.
