munication skills.

Young Minds of Awareness aspires to accomplish their mission to inspire and teach families to recognize barriers and utilize their strengths to overcome and reach their goals.

Moore, who has been involved with therapeutic foster care for more than 10 years, said he would like to see better transition plans and communication between kids' support systems. He also hopes to see more resources in the future so that more families and kids are helped.

"I'm confident with some of these characteristics in place, that our youth and families will have a better chance at being successful and productive members of our society," he said.
