

Mississippi
 Alberta
 North Portland

Vancouver
 East County
 Beaverton

PHOTO BY CARI HACHMANN/THE PORTLAND OBSERVER

Zoning for higher density housing and a developer's intention to build two new units on the site puts one of the oldest homes in the Boise Neighborhood of north Portland on the path to demolition. The 1890 Edwin Rayworth house is located at 3605 N. Albina Ave.

Collision Course

Historic home in path of higher density

BY LEE PERLMAN
 THE PORTLAND OBSERVER

The good news is that so many people have said they want to save this house. The bad news is that it may not do much good.

Those are the words of Caroline Dao, Boise Neighborhood Association chair, on the fate of the historic Edwin Rayworth house at 3605 N. Albina Ave.

Housing developer Andre Koshuba plans to tear down the 1890 bungalow and build two units on the site. Neighborhood activists and preservationists are scrambling to see if the old house can be saved.

One of the first to raise the wrecking ball alarm was Roy Roos, author of several history books about Albina and

continued ▼ on page 19