NFL superstar Ndamukong Suh is congratulated by Portland Observer Publisher Mark Washington during a Grant High School ceremony Thursday in which Suh made a major contribution, joining Nike and other donors to pay for the complete renovation of the school's football and track facilities.

Two Powerhouses Help Grant

Ndamukong Suh and Nike team up for track and field

NFL superstar Ndamukong Suh returned back to his native Grant High School bearing gifts.

Suh through his Ndamukong Suh Family Foundation donated 250,000 to his high school alma-mater at a ceremony on Thursday at the northeast Portland school to mark the completion of a 12 year fundraising effort for a new turf athletic field and new synthetic track.

Portland City Commissioner Nick Fish said

Suh's contribution was pivotal in achieving complete funding for the project.

"Two powerhouses helped close the final funding this project, Nike and Ndamukong Suh." Fish said.

Nike provided a generous grant of $350,000; joining the Portland Parks and Recreation Bureau allocation of $452,000; the Portland Public Schools' contribution of $391,000; along with smaller donations from Friends of Grant Athletics.

Grant students have never had a turf athletic playing surface. The goal is to have the field and track completed before the start of the high school football season.
