New Seasons Market is celebrating the opening of its new store at 3445 N. Williams Ave.

New Seasons Market Opening

Williams Avenue location begins with a celebration

Community members, local food industry advocates, civic leaders and neighbors will gather at 9 am, Wednesday, Aug. 28, to join New Seasons Market in celebrating the opening of its new store at 3445 N. Williams Ave.

New Seasons Market President and Chief Executive Officer Wendy Collie will be joined by representatives from The Urban League of Portland, Portland Police Bureau Sunshine Division, Self Enhancement, Inc. and other special guests for a bread breaking ceremony to commemorate the store's official opening.

"Taking care of each other and the communities we serve is part of our mission," said Collie. "We're dedicated to being a great neighbor and a resource to local residents, schools, churches, the hospital, Red Cross and all the independent businesses we're joining in this vital corridor," said Collie.

The locally-owned grocer will bring 30,000-square feet of fresh foods, wellness products and everyday groceries to the community and much more, including 162 living-wage jobs, 115 of those working at the Williams store live in north and northeast Portland, store officials said.

By developing a former and abandoned Wonder Bread Bakery property, New Seasons also created Portland's first eco-district where excess heat from the store will be piped under Northeast Fremont Street to warm a future mixed-use building planned for a now vacant lot

The Williams Avenue New Seasons was constructed with sustainable stormwater management, low-VOC building materials, water reclamation and conservation systems. Free nutrition and wellness classes will be offered in an on-site community room, and 62 bike staples and 20 indoor bike lockers will accommo-
