

Let Portland Ring!

"We've forgotten the fight, we've forgotten the plight, we've forgotten the struggle."

In contradiction to Portland's progressive branding, Mondainé characterizes the city as "20 years behind" on providing full equality. "We're still judging people for their lifestyles, we're still etched in the backwoods of the horrors of the Deep South,"

He encourages Portlanders to vote, support the local chapter of the NAACP, which has dwindled in numbers, and empower other socially active groups representing local African Americans, like the Albina Ministerial Alliance, Urban League of Portland, and Self Enhancement, Inc.

University to Host Justice Mass

Supreme Court Justice Thomas to attend events

University of Portland will host U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas and its annual Red Mass on Thursday, Sept. 19.

Prior to the Mass, Justice Thomas will appear at 4 p.m. in the Chiles Center on campus, 5000 N. Willamette Blvd. The event, "A Conversation with U.S. Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas," will feature Justice Thomas answering questions from University of Portland political science professors Gary Malecha and William Curtis.

The University's Red Mass will follow at 5:30 p.m. and will be presided by The Most Reverend Alexander K. Sample, Archbishop of Portland, in the Chapel of Christ the Teacher on campus. The practice of the Red Mass dates back to the 13th Century in Paris and London. The Mass, requesting guidance from the Holy Spirit for all who administer justice, has been celebrated in the United States since 1938.

Both events are free and open to the public. There will be general seating, and tickets are not required. Attendees are asked to arrive early for time to clear security, and large bags or backpacks will not be allowed.

Following the events, a private dinner for the law community will be held at 6:30 p.m. in the Bauccio Commons.

Justice Thomas has been an associate justice on the United States Supreme Court since 1991 when he was nominated by President George H.W. Bush.
