Oregon Zoo Cubs 'Doing Great'

The newborn lions at Oregon Zoo are doing great with the smallest cub recovering from her health troubles. Keepers have selected possible names for each cub and are asking the public to vote for their favorites on oregonzoo.org. The smallest of the litter was hospitalized for nine days last month, but is doing much better now, zoo officials said.

Tradition and Modernity Collide

The Northwest Film Center presents Tall as the Baobab Tree, a Senegalese drama about one girl's efforts to save her young sister from an arranged marriage. Screenings take place on Monday, Oct 28 at 11 a.m. as part of an ongoing Global Classroom outreach program, and later at 7 p.m. as part of a public viewing in the Film Center's Whitsell Auditorium, inside the Portland Art Museum.
