

Portland activists Monica Beemer and Mic Crenshaw are stepping up to co-manage KBOO-FM, the non-commercial community radio station. PHOTO COURTESY KBOO RADIO

New Stewardship

Community radio station hires local activists

Monica Beemer and Mic Crenshaw, two very well-known local non-profit leaders begin their stewardship at KBOO this month. They'll share the duties of Station Manager.

Beemer plans to focus on KBOO's financial well-being while Crenshaw looks forward to working closely with personnel — both paid staff and volunteer programmers.

In a joint statement, the two expressed eagerness at the prospect of team management: "We would each hold responsibility for parts of the position that best utilized our strengths, skills and interests and support each other in fulfilling those parts."

Beemer has served as executive director at Sisters of The Road Cafe since 2005, calling on her organizational and fundraising skills to help transform a once-struggling community

continued ▼ on page 13