LOCAL NEWS Opportunity Shines

Housing advocate honored at retirement

Home Forward has honored longtime board member Lee Moore in a big way after his announcement of retirement.

A community building at the housing agency's latest HOPE VI re-development, Stephens Creek Crossing in southwest Portland will be named "The Lee E. Moore Sr. Opportunity Center" in honor of Moore's advocacy for housing programs.

Moore was instrumental in helping the government agency reach its public involvement, resident engagement, and contracting eq-

Portland State University faculty, students, and community members stage a walkout Thursday to support professors who are poised to strike after 10 months of stalled labor negotiations.

Protest Supports PSU Professors

Nearly 1,000 people, made up of faculty, students, community members and other campus workers, attended a walkout at Portland State University on Thursday after 10 months of stalled labor negotiations between professors and PSU administrators.

The American Association of University Professors of PSU represents more than 1,200 faculty and academic professionals at the school.

The association declared an impasse with the administration last week which allows for a potential strike in the spring term if no agreement is reached.

Mediation between the two sides will continue this week. Key bargaining issues are retaining educator-led higher education, reversing the erosion of faculty stability and equitable pay.

Roosevelt Design Needs Your Help

Future and current Roosevelt High School families, neighbors and citizens are encouraged to give their input as the Roosevelt High School modernization project has moved to an exciting stage.

Planning efforts are now focused on schematic design in which the layout of educational spaces and common areas are envisioned. Don't miss this opportunity to help shape the future school by attending an upcoming Roosevelt Design Workshop on Saturday, March 15 from 9 a.m. to noon at George Middle School, 10000 N. Burr Ave.

Early arrivals will be welcomed with a free breakfast. Free childcare and translation in Spanish and Somali will also be provided.
