Making Her Passion a Livelihood Attorney reaches out to serve disadvantaged

By OLIVIA OLIVA
THE PORTLAND OBSERVER

Lin J. Hendler, a manager of her own private law practice, is an Adult Congenital Heart Defect Survivor and fancies herself one of the few lawyers in her 30's who has survived two open heart surgeries.

It was these experiences that drive her passion to work for those fighting the same battles she has. As a lawyer, Hendler serves on the Multnomah Bar Association's Committee for Equality and Diversity. She is also on the executive board of Oregon State Bar's disability section.

She feels fortunate to work in Social Security disability and with clients whose struggles resonate with her experiences.

Hendler is mixed race herself and brings her multicultural experience to her practice. She is sensitive to cultural issues in a primarily white male driven practice. Her mother moved to the United States at age 14 and consequently, Hendler is sensitive to clients who need interpreters or who have difficulty understanding complex legal issues.

Hendler helps clients who feel underserved by the legal community. For a consultation on landlord tenant law, Social Security and Disability, or employment law, reach Lin Hendler at ljh-law.com.
