Choreographer Tracy Broyles and her dancers in 'Hyde,' a production that explores the dark side and other internal struggles of the human condition.

Exploring the Human Condition

'Hyde' is a new piece of dance and theater that explores our attraction to the dark side of our internal struggles, while posing the question-how do we move beyond our multiplicities?

Abstracted from the iconic tale of Jekyll and Hyde, the production coming to Xomtopia, 810 S.E. Belmont St., for two weekends, is tender, funny, alarming and compelling.

"Hyde" uses the language of the body in tandem with sound, vocalization, costume and video projection to create a recognizable and visceral piece about the human experience. The show is supported by a project grant from the Regional Arts Council and is partnering with p:ear to create continued support for art programs for at-risk youth.

Performances open Friday, Feb. 27 with Friday, Saturday and Sunday shows through March 8.

Tickets are $12 to $17 and available at brownpapertickets.com/event/1220277.

LOCAL NONPROFIT YOUTH ORGANIZATION NEEDS ITS COMMUNITY LEADERS AND THE COMMUNITY'S HELP TO STAY IN SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY!

Urban Bridges has been in service to the community for 8 years. Our donations were down in 2014 causing us financial hardship for the 1st time in 8 years. We teach & mentor youth from the ages of 7-19 yrs. old in specialized social protocol, etiquette, & image enhancement skills. Skills will empower & equip them for a better life in the home, community, school & on the job. We work with all children, boys & girls, especially troubled children, abused & abandoned children, children coming out of the justice system & children with little to no confidence & low self-esteem.

We receive very little outside funding. We need YOUR help (local businesses & individuals) to continue the life changing service that we provide to the community. Will you please, help us! To donate & find out more about Urban Bridges, please visit our web site at www.urbanbridges.org. Our phone number is 503-705-9473, my name is Patricia & I am the founder & Executive Director of Urban Bridges. Thank you for whatever you can do, from the least to the greatest!
