The Week in Review

PCC Fires District President

Portland Community College has opened a search for a new president after parting ways Monday with Jeremy Brown who was hired less than two years ago from Dowling College in New York to replace retiring PCC President Preston Pulliams. Via a negotiated departure with the PCC Board of Directors, Brown will collect his salary through June 30, in addition to $11,000 in attorney fees, and a $300,000 severance package.

First Ride on Orange Line

Gov. Kate Brown and U.S. Sen. Merkley joined about 500 people Friday for the first ride on the MAX Orange Line, the first time MAX trains operated at regular speeds with passengers along the entire 7.3-mile route between downtown Portland and north Clackamas County. The event marked a major milestone for the project, which opens in 119 days.

Biker Gang Shootout Kills 9

Motorcycle gangs gathered for a meeting at a popular restaurant in Waco, Texas got into a shootout Sunday that left nine bikers dead and 18 injured, and it sent panicked patrons and bystanders fleeing for safety.

$15 Fair Wage Adopted

The Portland City Council voted last week to amend its fair wage policy, raising pay for more than 150 contractors and some full-time workers to $15 an hour. The new policy applies to parking attendants, security guards, and janitorial staff in city-owned or operated buildings. The policy takes effect July 1.

Baby Arrives in Transit

Firefighters helped a woman deliver a baby at the intersection of Southeast 10th and Woodward Street Monday morning after the expectant mother and her husband realized they would not make it to the hospital. Crews helped the woman deliver on scene and both the mother and her child were transported by ambulance from the scene and are reportedly in good health.

Driver Hits Two People

A 27-year-old man who police say got into a fight early Sunday at the White Eagle bar on North Russell Street, fled the establishment in a vehicle, and then hit two people with his car, has been identified as Avery Camacho. One woman was critically injured and one man suffered an injury when Camacho drove over his foot.

Victim's Mother Clarifies Story

The Portland Observer wishes to correct two statements from a story about families gathering to stop more black youth from dying, "Converting Pain into Purpose" from our May 13 issue.

Lucy Mashia, one of the Portland mothers quoted in the story, said her son, Leonard Irving died four years ago, not two, as was printed in a photo caption. She also clarified that she believes she knows who may have killed her son, but that witnesses have refused to step forward with information on the killer's identity.

THE SPINA COLUMN™

An ongoing series of questions and answers about America's natural healing profession.

Part 10. Fatigue: A cure for people sick and tired of being of being sick and tired.

Q: I seem to be tired a lot lately. Does that mean I need iron?

A: The most common reason patients come into our office is because of some type of pain. But many of these people are also suffering from fatigue. Fatigue that makes the eyes burn slows down the healing process and makes you wonder why you don't feel as well as you used to. Obviously, there can be many causes of fatigue. Diet is certainly one of them. It's a subject we'd be happy to discuss with you in detail. Another cause, however is often stress. Many of you have probably heard of the "Fight Or Flight" syndrome. When the body is stressed, it responds with a combat-ready posture. In analyzing many such patients' x-rays, we find the head angled forward and the back arched in this highly-stressed position. After Chiropractic adjustment, this condition is often vastly improved.

Patients come back well-rested, telling us they just had their best night's sleep in ages. If you think the stress of everyday life might be wearing you down and preventing your body from warding off illnesses, call us for an appointment. Or if there are any other questions you might have about your health, just call us at the phone number below.
