Summer Reading for Kids

Free program
invites youth to explore and learn

Kids of all ages can sign up at any neighborhood library of the Multnomah County Library system for a free summer reading program that entices kids to read for pleasure and maintain the skills they learned during the school year, while also encouraging lifelong library use.

The theme for this year's program is superheroes. Through books and inventive free programs, summer readers will learn that being a superhero can mean much more than flying or fighting crime. Real life superheroes have causes like advancing education, protecting the environment or speaking up for equality.

Participants engage in any number of literacy-building activities and track their progress on gameboards, earning books, free passes, restaurant coupons and other prizes as they complete levels.

Activities include reading, being read to, listening to audiobooks, writing and drawing a superhero comic, creating a heroic character, writing a story about an imaginary superpower and more.

"Summer means exploration and adventure," said Library Youth Services Director Katie O'Dell. "Summer Reading brings those fun and positive things together, while helping kids to feel a sense of achievement that supports reading and learning."

Historic Black Golfers Tournament

Sixty-one years ago, African Americans and other people of color were not welcome at many public and private golf courses throughout the Western U.S. This led to the founding of Western States Golf Association in 1954 to encourage African Americans to enjoy the game of golf.

This week, the association's affiliated club members, representing 34 clubs in six states, will be in Portland to participate in its annual championship tournament, bringing three days of play to Heron Lakes Great Blue, Rose City Golf Course and Stone Creek Golf Course, Wednesday, June 24 through Saturday, June 27.

Officials said Portland was selected because of its outstanding golf courses and tourist activities, because of an incentive from the Visitor Development Fund, generated by Multnomah County's lodging and car rental tax, and last but not least, Portland's Leisure Hour Golf Club was one of the first African American focused golf clubs to become one of the association's founding members.
