

Harold Williams Court

Children from late African-American community leader Harold C. Williams Sr. hold up a plaque honoring their father during a dedication ceremony naming the basketball court at Portland Community College's Cascade Campus, the Harold C. Williams Sr. Court. Pictured at the Dec. 2 ceremony, (from left) are siblings Harold Williams Two and Natasha Butler, and Cascade Campus President Karin Edwards. Portland Community College dedicated the basketball court at the Cascade Campus in north Portland on Dec. 2 as the Harold C. Williams Sr. Court in honor of the late PCC board member and longtime leader in Portland's African-American community. The special ceremony was in recognition to the many years of service Williams gave the college, and for his public service as a long time advocate for people of color, the disadvantaged and others from the north and northeast Portland community.