'Party,' a ceramic sculpture by Marcia Smith.

Dennis Anderson paints familiar scenes, like the 'Alberta Rose' theater on northeast Alberta Street.

Guardino Gallery March shows

Alberta Street's Guardino Gallery presents a main gallery exhibit this month by a painter inspired by local scenes and featuring two artists who create sculptures.

Dennis Anderson's specializes in painting domestic scenes or banal incidents that seem familiar. His desire is to elevate the activities of daily life, those mundane scenes where the moment becomes the subject.

In the feature area, Marcia Smith will display ceramic sculpture from her cast of characters called Phantasmagoricals. She is drawn to the dualities of life; evoking a place between the tangible and subconscious, the familiar and the imaginary. They can conjure up engaging pleasures or unpleasant fears.

Also featured is James M. Lilly who creates wall sculptures with paint and wood. He has termed them as "relics" since that seems to most accurately describe their format and purpose. Guardino Gallery is located at 2939 N.E. Alberta St.
