Identity through the Lens of Black Cinema

Short films screen at PCC Cascade

Experimental short films from black filmmakers past and present exploring identity will be presented in a public program titled "Black Cinema 1: Image and Mirage, Meaning and Identity," that takes place Friday, April 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Terrell Hall auditorium on the Portland Community College Cascade Campus. Suggested admission is $8.

The films were chosen to engage black artists addressing race in their works and the African-American community here in Portland. The program partners are a group of black artists in Portland called the Black Creative Collective: Brown Hall; and the Cinema Project, a Portland non-profit promoting public awareness of avant-garde cinema. Support also comes from the Multnomah County Cultural Coalition and an Arts Equity Grant from the Regional Arts and Cultural Council.

Distorted Guitar and Smooth Vocals

Gary Clark Jr., a Grammy Award-winning singer, songwriter and virtuoso guitarist from Austin, Texas, will perform Thursday, April 14 at the Roseland Theater, downtown. Clark shares the stage with legends of rock and roll, but is influenced by blues, jazz, soul, country, as well as hip hop. His musical trademarks are his distorted guitar sound and smooth vocal style.
