Executive to Lead Community Media

A veteran film and television producer who most recently has served as a marketing and communications executive with the Oregon Episcopal School in Portland has been named the new chief executive for MetroEast Community Media.

Martin 'Marty' Jones

Martin "Marty" Jones brings more than 25 years of diverse management, leadership, and marketing experience to the to the cable channel and website serving Gresham, Troutdale, Fairview, Wood Village, and unincorporated Multnomah County.

"Our Board was impressed with Marty's passion for storytelling, his expertise with marketing and media production, and his leadership capabilities," said Shannon Chisom, MetroEast Board vice president and search committee chair. She noted his long-standing interest in community media, which was sparked through his involvement as a teenager at a public access television center in Columbus, Ohio. MetroEast Community Media's mission is to invigorate civic engagement, inspire diverse voices, and strengthen community life.

The nonprofit makes community programming available to the public—including coverage of events and performances, productions that give voice to youth and diverse cultural communities, and coverage of local government meetings and elections.

"It's wonderful to inherit a fiscally strong organization, and I embrace the opportunity to help diversify and grow the revenue for MetroEast Community Media," Jones said.

Jones came to Portland and OES six years ago to establish the school's marketing and communications department.

Since Brown's departure, Sylvia Kelley, PCC's executive vice president, has served as interim president.

Dastmozd is the president and chief executive officer of Saint Paul College in Saint Paul, Minn., the most diverse and fastest-growing comprehensive college in the state. He has experience in strategic planning, accreditation and accountability initiatives and previously worked at Clark College in Vancouver as vice president of instruction and workforce education.

Mitsui has served as the Deputy Assistant Secretary for Community Colleges within the Office of Career, Technical and Adult Education for the U.S. Department of Education. In this role he works to advance the community college agenda of President Obama and the Secretary of Education. Prior to working in Washington D.C., he was the president of North Seattle College in Washington. Nish is the superintendent/president of the Southwestern Community College District in Chula Vista, Calif., which serves more than 20,000 students annually. She oversees five administrative divisions that operate student services, academic affairs, business and finance, technology and employee services.

Public forums with the presidential candidates will begin the week of May 23 with details about the sessions on the college's president search web page at pcc.edu/presidentsearch.

Orchestra, Houston Person, Joey DeFrancesco and legendary jazz royalty Ellis Marsalis.

"The experience of visiting the Greeley Jazz Festival this year was exhilarating," said James Powers, one of the Clark College winners. "It has been said that it can be disappointing to meet one's heroes, but I can say that that is not always the case. When speaking with some of the learned men of music, I was greeted with humility and kindness. Just as important as the uplifting musical performances, was the realization that these performers were all just regular people who have just practiced more than I have."

The other Clark students to receive awards were Mattias Tyni, trumpet; Keith Cheek, tenor saxophone; Anna James, tenor saxophone; Jenny Baird, trombone; Hayden Lilak, bass; Josh Gonzales, drums; and Sam Niborg, drums.
