she can or cannot make it because of her health or if she's busy."

Williams hopes to go to college at the University of Oregon and be on their track team. In the future, he would love to be a Special Olympics Coach to spread his positivity and encouragement to others. Who could be a better leader?

Williams has shown from a young age that he's committed to representing the autism community in a positive light. He hopes to prove to those who question the abilities of people with autism, or any other disability, wrong by showing them that they are capable of achieving great things.

Williams is working to show people that differences are not deficits, and you could say he's definitely on the right track.

ington, from where he earned his master's degree.

"I am thrilled to have been chosen to lead PCC, and I look forward to a long-term commitment with such a highly respected institution, one that is built on an exceedingly strong foundation," said Mitsui.

"Portland Community College is known for its collaboration, outreach and engagement, both internally and externally.

On personal and professional levels, this philosophy and approach resonate with me. I have a sign in my office that reads, 'If you want to go fast, go alone. If you want to go far, go together.' I am excited to go far together with my colleagues at PCC, on behalf of the institution and the students we serve,"

he said.
