Superintendent Pick Withdraws

Interim Superintendent Bob McKean is not expected to return to lead the district through the 2017 academic year. Deputy CEO Yousef Awwad will be responsible for managing the school system while the board members restart the hunt for a permanent superintendent, district officials said.

Dickey currently works with Atlanta Public Schools where he has been widely championed as a competent reformer. He formerly served in administrative roles in the public school districts of Baltimore and Philadelphia.

The search for a new head administrator began after former PPS Superintendent Carole Smith stepped down last July, following revelations that many district facilities had unsafe levels of lead in drinking water faucets.
