Carol Chapel uses mixed media to draw and capture the essence of insects.

Artists View Natural World

The works of two artists who view the natural world through a lens highlight the Main Gallery show for January at Guardino Gallery, 2939 N.E. Alberta St.,

Carol Chapel's inspiration for her "Unseen World" of insects came from looking in a microscope. She communicates the essence of insects through her drawings.

Jerri Barthlomew is a microbiologist who uses glass as a medium to explore the microbial world. She thinks of her process as collages in glass, combining photographic screen prints using a variety of fusing and cold-working techniques.

In the gallery's Feature Area, Paul Griffiths presents his 3D fractal art using the fundamental beauty of mathematics, as seen in nature, and the aid of advanced technology as a new means of expression.

Jerri Bartholomew's "Under the Microscope" explores the microbial world.
