A new play at Teatro Milagro, Portland's premiere Latino theater space, explores dual identities, whether that's bilingual, bi-national, bicultural, etc.

New Play Explores Dual Identities

A new play explores the role that individuals with a dual identity—whether that's bilingual, bi-national, bicultural, etc.—face in the world, but not in our world and not in a way that you'd expect.

Written by New York Based playwright and director Georgina Escobar, Bi- will see its 2018 world premiere on Friday, Jan. 12 at Teatro Milagro, Portland's premiere theater space at 525 S.E. Stark St.

Drawing inspiration from the book Flatland by Edwin Abbott and set in the year 2073 in Tierra Plana, a nation of squares, walls, boxes, and other shapes with multiple identities, but are only assigned a singular one by their government.

Dañel Malán, who co-founded Milagro with her husband José Eduardo González in 1989, helped develop the play with Escobar, who is originally from Ciudad Juarez, Mexico. The play is co-directed and choreographed by Portland-based performance artist and instruct Gabriela Portuguese, who also founded cultural arts education center Latin Groove PDX Productions.

Shows run through Jan. 20. For tickets and more information, visit milagro.org.
