Dream Center Opens

Oregon community college or university officially opened Jan. 22, made possible through a $50,000 grant from the Meyer Memorial Trust.

Liliana Luna, Rock Creek Multicultural Center coordinator and a DACA recipient, said PCC has long recognized that undocumented and DACA students face unique barriers that require additional mental, emotional and financial support.

The idea for the new resource came from the students. They wanted to ease pressures on DACA recipients by taking down barriers to financial assistance and the navigation of college resources. Under the supervision of the campus' Multicultural Center, the students came up with a plan, did exhaustive research, and presented their final concept to college leadership.

"They met with me in my office two years ago and told me,

"This will happen," recalled Rock Creek President Sandra Fowler-Hill of the students' determination. "I'm so proud of their work."

The opening of the center fits into PCC's mission. Last year, the college's Board of Directors declared the institution a "sanctuary college" to aid and protect undocumented students.

President Mark Mitsui emphasized concerns about the impact of potential changes in federal immigration policy on PCC's undocumented students as the reason for the decision. The students and their new resource center coordinator -- Jhoana Monroy -- appreciated the symbolism of the center's opening.

"It's something big and unique we are going through," said Monroy. "This is an honor for me to be serving these students, who strive for success, education, advocacy and, above all else, to further their dreams."

THE SPINA COLUMN™

An ongoing series of questions and answers about America's natural healing profession.

Part 4. Stress: How Chiropractic can help ease life's day-to-day pressures.

Q: I hear a lot about stress these days. Just how serious is it?

A: Stress causes high blood pressure, which in turn is a major cause of strokes and heart disease. It can lead to asthma, arthritis, insomnia and migraines. It impairs the immune system and is estimated to cost the nation over $100 billion each year in lost productivity, absenteeism and health care costs. That's pretty serious.

Q: I have a very stressful job. How can Chiropractic help me?

A: Modern Chiropractic care can help de-stress your body. By helping your nervous system work more smoothly, Chiropractic helps assure that all your body functions (including the ones negatively affected by stress) are working properly. What's more, today's Chiropractors can also help you with natural relaxation techniques such as yoga, massage and visualization. For less stress, or more answers to any questions you might have about your health, you'll find that Chiropractic is often the answer. Call us for an appointment today.
