PORTLAND OBSERVER AutoReview

Chevrolet has introduced the strongest, most advanced Silverado ever.

The all new-Silverado isn't just for show. It's here to work, offering a more muscular presence on the road along with enhanced aerodynamics.

The Silverado starts at $28,300 with its standard 69.9 cubic foot bed and comes in with a 15/20 city/highway gas mileage ratio.

The Silverado LT adds a buch of special features like a rear sliding power window, 120-volt power outlet, HD radio, HD rear vision camera, Bose premium sound system, cargo bed LED lighting, heated steering wheel, front and rear park assist, and other features to bring the cost estimate to $48,300.

The premium package also includes a tailgate with lift assist, power lock and release remote start and a theft-deterrent unauthorized entry system.

The Week in Review

Victim's Family on Hate Law

The family of Larnell Bruce Jr., the black teenager murdered in Gresham by a member of a white supremacist gang asked lawmakers Monday to pass a bill that would strengthen the state's hate crime statute. The new law would have added up to five years to the life sentence given to Russell Courtier, the man convicted.

Worker Kills 12 in Virginia

Twelve people were killed and five injured Friday after a shooter opened fire at the Virginia Beach Municipal Center in Virginia. Responding officers shot the suspect, a longtime city engineer named DeWayne Craddock, who also later died. The suspect entered the building with his employee security pass.

Former Sheriff Loses Case

Former Multnomah County Sheriff Dan Staton retaliated against an assistant for pursuing an investigation over a draft audit that found a disproportionate use of force by corrections officers against black inmates, a jury in Portland ruled Thursday. The county will have to pay the former deputy, Brent Ritchie $250,000 plus attorney fees.

R. Kelly Faces 11 New Charges

Prosecutors charged R&B singer R. Kelly on Thursday with 11 new sex-related counts, including some that carry a maximum sentence of 30 years in prison, making them the most serious against him. Kelly pleaded not guilty to the original charges and denied any wrongdoing after his February arrest.

Few to Benefit on Rent Control

Few renters will get any benefit from Oregon's first-of-its-kind rent control law in the next few years, a report from Portland State University revealed last week. The new law caps annual rent increases at 7% plus inflation, for a total of 10.3% this year. But the PSU Northwest Economic Research Center says median rent growth has slowed to just 1.9% a year since 2016.

Support for Climate Lawsuit

Multnomah County Commissioners on Monday showed their support for young people who are suing the federal and state governments for failing to protect the environment as the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals takes up their case, Juliana v. United States on Tuesday Portland. "Our children have the right to a stable climate," said Chair Deborah Kafoury.
