DIFFICULTIES IN WAY OF RE-MOVAL BY UNITED STATES.

Congress is Likely to Take Action Captain Harry Taylor's Views of the Matter.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—The damage done by the overflowing of the Nooksack river, in Whatcom county, Washington, has been called to the attention of the war department. It has been suggeste for the removal of a log jam near the mouth of the river, and it is probable that some action will shortly be taken for the relief of the settlers in the flooded dis-

A survey was made some time ago with a view to having the jam removed, but nothing was done. While it is probable that congress could act under the old sur-vey, it is deemed best to have a new one made. Commenting on the removing from the mouth of the Nocksack river certain logs and jams which have had the effect of injuring navigation, and, by the backing up of the water, seriously affecting the interests of riparian proprietors, Cap-tain Harry Taylor, of the engineer corps stationed on Puget sound, says:

"The collection of these logs and jams and the consequent backing up of the water seems to have been brought about very largely by the construction of a boom which exists at the mouth of the timeduring the enrly part of the year 1890. Complaint was made against this beem three years ago, as an obstruction to navigntion, and a suit was brought in the United States circuit court for the district of Washington to compel the resnoval of this boom. The decree which was handed down February 20, 1896, sus-had ample power prior to the enactment by congress of the river and harbor act of September 19, 1890, to authorize the construction of this boom, and that at the time of its construction it was authorized by law, and therefore not a nuisance nor an unlawful obstruction to navigation and in the second place that the chief of the Nooksack river as a highway is for the floating of sawlogs, and that persons and corporations having occasion to use it for these purposes have rights equal to the rights of others to use the river as a nighway for boats and vessels, and that a boom at the mouth of the giver necessary for gathering and holding sawlogs is to be regarded as an aid to the use of the river for a lawful purposa, and entitled to protection the same as a wharf or pier constructed at a convenient place for the convenience of vessels,"

"The decree was forwarded by the chief of engineers, by second indomement, undate of March 6, 1895, to Captain W. L. Fisk, corps of engineers.

"Upon the recommendation of the dis-trict attorney, this case was appealed, and I have been informed unofficially that the defendant was again sustained in the appellate court. I have no official knowledge of the result of the appeal.
"A report of a survey of the Nooksack river was submitted by Captain T. W. Symons, corps of engineers, under date of January 14, 1895. Accompanying this report was a tracing showing the condi-tions at the mouth of the Nooksack river. Captain Symons suggested two plans for improving the mouth of the river, each which was estimated to cost about $35,600. One of these plans was suggested in case the courts decided that the boom company had no rights paramount to the rights of the United States to make changes, and the other plan was suggested for adoption, if for legal reasons it was deemed best not to adopt the first that the boom as maintained at the mouth of the river is a legal structure. and entitled to protection as such, it does not seem to me that either one of these plans can be adopted without violating the rights of the boom company, as one tially desiroys it, and the other di to enter Bellingham bay entirely outsid of the boom, and would as effectually de-stroy the usefulness of the boom as the first plan. Since Captain Symons' report was submitted, I understand that the jam at the mouth of the river has increased very materially, and that the mouth of the river is now practically closed, so that even the logging operations are carried on with difficulty. It would now probably cost double the amount of Captain Symons' estimate to clear the mouth of the river, due to the greater extent of the jam, and it is also probable that entirely different plan would have to appealed to a number of times to send the snagboat into the Nooksack river to remove these log jams, but I have de-clined to order her to the river on account of the great difficulty she would have in entering the stream, and the probability of her being wreaked on the time flats while trying to find an entrance into the river. In the condition in which the mouth of the river is at the present time, she could only effect an entrance at extreme high tide, and it is probable that even to do that it would require many days' work to clear away the snage which have accumulated. If during the prose-cution of this work she should ground upon a snag, (as she might very likely do), with the falling of the tide she would mimost certainly be wrecked.

"It therefore does not appear to me practicable to so improve the mouth of status of affairs as to permit such free outflow of the flood waters as would re-lieve the lands along its lower course from the dangers of overflow."

Kipling's Place in Literature. The sympathy of the world for Kipling. when the affliction fell upon himself and his family at New York, led, as was natural, to some overestimate of his place in letters. The Oregonian commented on this at the time, and expressed the opinion that his position was not so sure as to render some reaction impossible. think him an original force in English letters, but doubt whether he will be much read 20 years hence. It was thevitable that his success should raise up critics and even enemies; other authors less in demand flour him, and the critics, anxious to celabrate new literary stars in the firmament, ilbe at him. Allowance is to be made for these motives, which have nothing in them of permanent force; yet it remains true, as The Oregonian pointed out some time ago, that there seems to be in Ripling's work little of the quality that makes for immortal authorship. In the Contemporary Review, Robert Buchanan, who is at chronic feud with the world, seth on edge with the vocabulary of the London Boolgan it is raving in capital letters about the Seraphim and the Pit and the Maid-ess Nine and the Planets. Mr. Kipling, in a sond, although not a poet at all in the true my of serious thought or deep feeling is in his remon he is likely to be forgotten as Tomorrow, when the wind changes and the silly crowd is in another and possibly suzer temper, he is certain to fare very differently. The misfortune is that his effusions have no real poetical quality to preserve them when their momentary purpose has been served. Of more than one poet of this generation it has been suid that "he uttered nothing base." Of. Telegraph Early in Politics.

Fraid Fight

A. M. McClure, in Saturday Evening Post. The rejection of all the important can-didates and the nomination of Polk, who had not been thought of for the presidency, astounded the democrats throughout the country, and it was at first indignantly resented by the friends of Van Buren. In order to conciliate the Van Buren people, Silas Wright of New York, Van Buren's closet friend and then one of our ables senators, was nominated for vice-presi dent, but unfortunately for Wright, Professor Morse had just completed his ex-perimental telegraph line between Washington and Baltimore, and Wright was advised of his nomination by telegraph—one of the earliest news messages that passed over the line—and he instantly responded with a curt and peremptory declination. which resulted in the nomination of George

M. Dallas, of Philadelphia, After mature deliberation the friends of Van Buren decided to give an earnest support to Polk, and Senator Wright was impelled to take the nomination for governor, to carry his state. He thus came governor in 1844, instead of vice president, and in 1845 suffered a humiliat ing defeat in a contest for re-election that practically ended his public career. Had there been no telegraph he would have been the vice-president.

A Substantial Editorial Article.

The Cornhill. Mr. Cooper, the editor of the Scotsman, tells, in his autobiography, a story of how a leader writer (who it has been suggested was the late James Hannay), being pressed by the printer's devil for a leading article, and having allowed the time to go by in which he could construct one of his own which he could construct one of his own, took the scissors, cut out a "leader" from that day's Times, pasted it on a sheet of paper, and writing on it the headline, "What Does the Times Mean by This?" sent the whole article as his contribution to the leading columns of his own journal he sent it in-simply an article from the Times headed by the query: "What Does the Times Mean by This?"
