MEETING NOTICES.

JUDGE HENNESSY FINES & CHINESE $240 FOR VIOLATING IT.

Celestial Served Liquor in His Restaurant-The Judge's Decision.

Lee Wing Gow was fined $100 by Judge Honnessy yesterday for serving liquor in his restaurant without a license. Besides this, he will have to pay $100 license, $15 penalty for not having obtained the license in time, and his attorney's fees will amount to $5, making a total of $240 as a result of selling a 40-cent bottle of "Chi-nese champagne." As there is no appeal from Judge Hennessy's decision, Mr. Gow will probably pay the fine and costs with-out further parley. In fact, it is understood that his attorney has advised him to do so. The case might be taken to a higher court on a writ of review, but if the lower court is sustained the costs would simply pile up higher. In rendering his decision, Judge Hennessy said:

"Defondant is charged with selijng liquor without a license. It seems he was at the time in question engaged in serving customers in a restaurant in this city, and while so engaged, License Offi-cer Beach entered the place and ordered a meal and liquor, and he was furnished with a bottle of Chinese gin. It is con-ceded that neither the defendant nor the restaurant in which he was employed or owned, as the case may be, had a license for the sale of liquor. The officer paid for the liquor and took the bottle with him.

The defense is that the defendant was an occasional employe only, and had no authority to sell the liquor, and, further-more, that he did not have the liquor upon the premises, but went out to a neight ing store or saloon and obtained it. In ing store or shroon and obtained it. In my judgment, neither of these facts are a defense to the charge. To permit any such contentions on behalf of defend-antis charged with this violation of the ordinance, would be to permit its violation with impunity. It is, of course, im-possible to determine from what place these liquors are obtained, and I think the letter and spirit of the law prohibit the sale in restaurants without a license first being obtained, no matter from what source the liquor is had. This rule is a protection to the legilimate restaurant and saloon-keepers, grocery stores and other places which have obtained licenses and paid heavily for the privilege of selling and disposing of liquors. Any other interpretation of the law would open the door for constant violation of the or-dinance, and it would be impossible to obtain evidence to secure a conviction, Furthermore, I seriously doubt if a person would have a right to go out and buy liquor and then sell it in a place which is not licensed for its sale. "Under the testimony, in any event, it is clear that the liquor was found upon the premises. As to the want of authority on the part of the defendant to sell this Inquor. It think there is nothing in that inquor. It think there is nothing in that contention. Even if the defendant was not the proprietor of the place. It was the duty of the person who was the proprietor to see that the laws were properly en-forced. The law is intended to be interproted in a fair manner, and it means, in my judgment, that liquor cannot be sold upon any premises unless a license is obtained therefor. Being of that opinion, I must find the defendant guilty. The judgment of the court is that he is guilty Mr. Beach, city license collector, says he has quite a time making some res taurant-keepers understand that they can-not send out for liquor for their cusers without having first procured a re tail liquor license, which permits them to sell in less quantities than one gallon. Neither can a retailer sell five quart bottles at one time without having taken out a wholesale liquor-dealer's license, which would be $200 a year additional Ten retailers have already taken out the wholesaler's license, but there are some others who are likely to sell to the wrong party and thus get hurt, Mr. Beach says.

that its changes are simply due to changes in its position as respects the earth and sun, and that its varying appearances are all borrowed, we see how absurd the notion is that the moon does influence our weather. There is, however, another argument that appears quite valid at first sight. If the moon can raise a tide of 60 feet in the ocean, why may it not raise a tremendous tide in the extremely tenuous air, 800 times lighter than water, or a tide of about 48,000 feet, and, if so, it seems easy to see that such a commotion would affect our weather enormously. The tide of 60 feet (the highest in the world) is experienced only in the Bay of Fundy, and is due to the configuration of the Atlantic coast. In the open Pacific the tide is only a little over one foot. Most careful observations of a lunar atmospheric tide have been made at St. Helena, in midocean, and have show a tide a little more than .001 inch. Since ordinary weather changes affect the pressure 100 times as much, we see how extremely insignificant the moon's total effect must be, There is a common saying, "The full oon has power to drive away clouds,' and some computations seem to bear out this idea. If any one will look to the east as the rising moon shines through the clouds, he will often see the clouds disappear. There is a natural explanation for this, however, and in no wine depend-ent upon the moon. A long series of observations has shown a diurnal range in cloudiness with a minimum point, or time of least clouds, from 6 to 9 P. M., hence we see that, as the full moon rises and advances in the sky during this period. there will often appear a diminution of clouds. Lord Rosse turned his big re-flecting telescope (so big that a tall man walking erect in it could carry a spread umbrella) toward the moon, and found that, if anything, the earth received just a little chilling from the full moon. More recently the bolometer, an instrument which can measure less than one millionth part of a degree of temperature change, has shown that the earth receives a tiny bit of heat from the full moon. The evi-dence, is cumulative and overwhelming that no weather changes can be ascribed

A Statement for the Times. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmas would not nave loved the Boston Aguinaldians if he had lived to see them at their unpatriotic work. Many years ago, and apropos of the English in India, he wrote: "We can't stop to settle all the doubtful questions; all we know is, that the brute nature is sure to come out most strongly in the lower race, and it is the general law that the human side of humanity should treat the brutal side as it does the same nature in the inferior animalstame it or crush ff."

JAMES MARTINEAU.

A Brief Estimate of a Very Great

James Martineau was, and long had been, the most distinguished Unitarian preacher of his time. This designation is, however, too limited for the man and his work for his denominational teachings were but one of the many forms of ex-pression of his wonderful intellect. Never reparated from the Unitarian fold-indeed, drawing closer to its administrative and educational system as his long life grew longer-James Martineau yet stood to his countrymen and the world as a man apart by reason of his eminence. Thus it was with perfect consistency that Leyder could make him doctor of theology, Edinburgh doctor of divinity, and Harvard and Oxford confer upon him, respectively, the degrees of LL, D. and D. C. L. The field of pure thought was familiar to his intellectual activity, and from every corner of it he brought contributions to the world's moral lore. The law within the law was ever his objective. He was great as a preacher gifted with a charming and persuasive delivery; but he widened his labors until he became a great ethical teacher, with nothing of the mystic about him or his style. Theology he soon left behind him in his search after the inner law. An encyclopedia in his knowledge of theology, yet he was not a theologian simply because he would not be. To him Englishmen looked in later years very much as men of all creeds in this country looked to Emerson, as one from whom must come utterances of a thought deep-delved for, one that if it challenged attention challenged the attion of respect and reflection.

Martineau's position in England was pocultar. In a society greatly influenced by a state oburch, James Martineau, the foremost dissenter of Great Britain, was nimost revered. To us this may appear nothing strange, but it was indeed a social tribute to dissent which could only have been exalted by an intellect of wonderful power for light joined to a character of mingled force and sweetness. Martineau had the charm of Channing added to a personality far more vigorous. In many respects intellectually there was a strong sympathy between him and Channing. Both represented the Protestantism, of dogma, but of a broad charity of faith and construction.

MOON AND THE WE ATHER.

Bellef That Our Satellite Influences Changes is a False One.

mor H. A. Hazen in Popular Science A belief that the moon has a potent in-uence on weather changes is well nigh universal. The moon's appearance goes through such marked changes each month that it would be very natural to attribute weather changes to these. In this way undoubtedly such sayings as these have arisen: "The weather won't change till the moon changes." "If the moon lies so wa-tor cannot run out, we shall have a drought," "A wet moon is one upon which a huntsman can hang his horn," etc. Diligent inquiry at one time as to etc. Diligent inquiry at one time as to the popular belief regarding this question brought out the view, more persistent than any other that more rain will occur at the new than at the full moon. Singu-larly enough, in Connecticut, on Long Island sound, there does seem to be such a law, but it does not hold to the interior. a law, but it does not hold in the interior of the country, and a test on the Pacific const showed, if anything, exactly the opposite. At London, where observations have been made for more than a century a careful compliation for the whole period has shown no effect.

If we reflect that the moon is dead and does not have any air upon it, that it al-ways shows the same face to the earth,
