Warring with Satan in Portland Streets.

Go with thy flight from star to star, From world to luminous world, as far As the universe spreads its flaming walls...

URBSTONE religion is a condition not peculiar to the Pacific coast, but it flourishes here as perhaps in no other section of the country.

Portland keeps many people away from the churches, and that, were it not for the curstone clergy, all the churches would be filled every Sunday and new houses of worship would have to be erected to accommodate the overflow.

Several reasons exist for this belief. It is argued that many of these street-corner revivals are so supremely silly and ludicrous as to reflect discredit and bring derision and reproach upon Christianity in general.

Another reason, perhaps the gravest of all, is that these out-of-door performances tend to convey, and perhaps are intended to convey, the impression that workmen and poor people generally are not welcome in churches.

The Salvation Army. So those servants went out into the highways and gathered together all as many as they found, both good and bad, and the wedding was furnished with guests.—St. Matthew.

When a Catholic girl takes the veil and renounces the world, its pleasures and allurements, she takes it for keeps. No power, no passion, no temptation will cause her to cast longing glances back to the glittering shores of sin.

One bright and rather pretty Portland girl, who should have known better, fell it was her mission to join the Salvation Army.

Neils didn't get saved, but he kept hanging around. He became acquainted with the girl, and wooed her, poked her and all.

The Volunteers of America. I have made history. Ballington Booth and Maud, his wife, left better than they knew when they left their native land—the Salvation Army.

The Rescue Home. I know not, I care not, what guilt's in thy heart. The crowning feature of Salvation Army work in Portland is the Fourth-street home, which is conducted under the personal direction of Ensign Morgan and Captain Kinney.

Without money and just recovering from a "jag," find it a haven of rest and a shelter in times of storm, and come in and "get saved" without possessing the remotest idea of the plan of salvation. Some record for the first three weeks in January is 115 conversions. Sixteen was the record for last week.

The Workingmen's Home. Rain, rain, rain, my Saviour! Rain, rain, rain, my Lord!

The Portland Workingmen's Home is one of the practical branches of the Salvation Army work in this city. It has been maintained for the past nine months, in a commodious two-story building, at 223 Burnside street.

Meetings are also held in and from this building. This branch is in charge of Corps No. 1, officered by Captain and Mrs. Hubbard, Captain Holden and Lieutenant Charles Tucholke.

Married the Big Swede. There comes a rift within the lute That sometimes makes its mould mate.

some picturesque, fanciful and often exceedingly grotesque songs, to a crude accompaniment of music from cornets, guitars, tambourines and often screeching accordions.

of them wouldn't know the Holy Eucharist from a baptismal font. Had Lost His Job. A story is told of a Swede who had reached Portland with a pretty good roll and had gone the usual gait while it lasted.
