

LOOKING THE FILIPINOS

General Fred Grant Relates Some of His Campaign Experiences to Correspondent Carpenter.

(Copyright, 1900, by Frank G. Carpenter.) Manila, 1900.—I met General Fred Grant today, as he came from the field to consult with General Otis about the operations in Northern Luzon, and later on a chat with him about his work and the people among whom he has been campaigning. General Grant came here almost immediately after leaving Puerto Rico. I saw him last at Ponce, having traveled with him from San Juan around the island. He looks today the picture of health, and he tells me that he has been well ever since he came to the Philippines. He has been in the field and on the firing line since last July, and has been campaigning in both the northern and southern parts of Luzon.

"The palm leaves, it can be woven into a very close mat. "As we came to these villages the people scampered away like so many monkeys. They were afraid of us, and usually hid themselves behind trees or rocks, peeping out at us, and ready to run if we showed any intention of coming near them. Some of the men were armed with bows and arrows, and we had been warned that their arrows were poisoned. They did not attack us, and we did not bother them. "Our Philippine Dwarfs. "What kind of looking people are the Negritos, General?" I asked. "They are a race of dwarfed negroes," replied General Grant. "The word 'negrito' means 'little negro.' The word 'negro' means 'the negro.' The Negroes we saw in but few places, came up to my shoulder, and some were pigmies in size. They have woolly hair, which stands out in curly masses over their heads; faces as black as those of the African negroes, thick lips and flat noses. Most of them were in breech cloths, the women wearing a strip about two feet long about the thighs and waist. Both sexes are puny and sickly looking. They have enormous stomachs, made so by their living almost entirely upon roots, vegetables and fruits. The stomachs reminded me of the 'banana stomachs' of the peasant children of Puerto Rico. "Will we have any trouble in conquering them?" "I see no reason why we should bother with them at all," replied the General. "They are comparatively few, and are so weak mentally and physically that it would be difficult to make American citizens of them. They are nearer to the Hottentot than the American Indian in the scale of possible civilization. All they would need would be a small reservation, and if well treated, they would bother nobody. "How about the Igorrotes?" "I don't know much about them," said General Grant. "They are in the northeastern part of Luzon. My campaigning has been chiefly in the South and Northwest. They are, I am told, entirely different from the Negritos, and, though savage, are a fine race. "What kind of country did you find in Northwestern Luzon, General?" "The whole of Luzon is a land of mountains and valleys. The northern part is made up of ranges of mountains with fertile valleys between them. The valleys are usually well cultivated, being covered with rice fields and sugar plantations. Some of the mountains are tremendous. They rise up from the sea, in places sometimes reaching an altitude of 5000 or 6000 feet. They are of volcanic origin and the sides of many of them are covered with lava. In some sections there is a thin strata of limestone over the lava. This gives forth a hollow sound as you ride over it on horseback, and I feared at times my horse might break through. "Timber Resources. "The most of the mountainous regions is covered with a dense growth of vegetation, and those which have any depth of soil are heavily timbered. I saw large tracts of magnificent trees, including many varieties of valuable hard woods. I saw houses and furniture made of the wood; it is in many cases as hard as iron and it takes a polish like mahogany. I can't tell you the varieties, but must remember that I was more interested in watching out for the Filipinos who might be hidden behind the trees with their guns than as to how the trees would cut up into lumber. I could see, in passing, that the timber is of immense value. About Subig Bay, for instance, there are thousands of acres of virgin forest which have never been touched. This timber is easily gotten at, for the bay will carry the largest steamers. They might, in fact, sail into it upside down if such a thing were possible, and their masts would not graze the bottom. It is, I am told, about 100 feet deep and a great depth is found even at the shore line. The Oregon had to put out about 50 fathoms of chain when she came to anchor, at a swinging distance from the land. "The Spaniards appreciated the value of this timber," continued General Grant, "and were making arrangements to get it out to use in shipbuilding, at the time the war began. They have graded a little railroad up one of the valleys, and the rails lie beside the track ready to be laid. There is, I should say, about three or four miles of this roadbed. "You see that the timber would offer some opportunities for American capital," said I. "Yes; it would," replied General Grant. "The trees could be easily gotten down to the river, and from there they could be floated where they could be shipped to any part of the world. "How about the other parts of the country? What are the chances for agricultural development?" "In some sections they are very good. The product of rice and sugar could be largely increased with scientific cultivation. The sugar lands can be made to yield a larger product per acre, and with good machinery more sugar could be gotten out of the cane. A number of modern sugar mills might be established here to grind cane for the small planters. They could pay the people as much for the cane as they now get from raising and grinding it, and still make a big profit off the increase in the product. This is to him was that the soldiers on the firing line were supplied with fresh beef killed in Chicago, more than 2000 miles away. FRANK G. CARPENTER. THE OLD BAND. In a little mountain village, One started every day, The old town band as usual, A concert for to play. And so the sweetest melody, Heard out the great refrain, Fond memories of the long ago, West dashing through my brain. How often when a boy had I Followed down the street, Barfooted, hallooed, coalies, The old town band to meet. How I longed to beat the small drum, The symbols, how they clashed, To the Italian waltz to meet. In the sunlight, how they flashed, I heard them play sweet music, At the wedding-near the mill, I heard their mournful cadence, When a form lay cold and still. I heard them play fast galoppe, At an old-time county fair, And the brilliant, ringing solo, At the band stand, in the square. Here the lover and his sweetheart Promised always to be true, While the music of "Oh, Promise Me," Flouted out into the blue. And the old folks smiled and listened, Would again play waltz-time tunes, How "Uncle Rautau" did the "wing dance" Underneath the Southern moon. I've wandered far in other climes, I've heard their famous band, From the sweet "La Paloma," of Mexico, To the Italian waltz to meet. But when the evening shadows fall I dream of a Southern land, And again in fancy seem to hear, The tones of our old band. So when life's busy scene is o'er, And I stand before the gate, I trust that good Saint Peter Will not say, "Alas, too late!" For I know that I shall ask him, In a modest sort of way, To let me hear the merry tunes Our old band used to play. —Lucy Vernon. Things Have Changed. "I'll not allow you to dictate to me," cried the angry former typewriter. "No," replied her husband angrily. "I suppose I relinquished that right when I married you."—Philadelphia North American.
