FORTY-ONE YEARS AGO

AN ADDRESS BY THE REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE OF OREGON.

Invitation to Members of Old Parties to Come Out for a New Organization Based on New Issues.

PORTLAND, Or., April 28.—(To the Editor.)—The following is a copy of an address issued at Portland, when great and important questions were the issue, the preservation of the Union, April 25, 1859, by the Republican Central Committee of Oregon, composed of H. W. Corbett, E. D. Shattuck and W. C. Johnson. We publish the same as somewhat applicable to the present time, when Sound-Money Democrats of the Thomas H. Benton type (old Bullion, as he was called), in the good old days of sound Democracy, are lining up with Sound-Money Republicans to settle once for all time the free-silver craze of 16 to 1, that would give us a 47-cent dollar, and disturb the stability of our currency and all existing value. No good citizen can afford to indorse any man representing or standing for office, who maintains these views. This is a Presidential year. It is important that the policy of the Republican party should be thoroughly indorsed—sound money, protection to American industry, and an open market in all our possessions for American products. H. W. CORBETT.

To the Voters of Oregon.

Fellow Citizens: In a government founded on the will of the people, the actions and doings of that government should be such as are acceptable to that people. If an individual or party of individuals select a man to carry out the views and accomplish the ends thought by him or them to be proper and right, and that trustee proves recreant to the confidence reposed in him, does he or they hesitate to repudiate all connection with said trustee? Now, as the interests of our common country are of greater weight with every honest American citizen than any other one thing, why is it that in political parties men fear to do that which they would never give a second thought in individual cases? If party name and party trammels dictate the action and regulate the standard of our rights; if we, after we once belong to a party, must co-operate with that party because only of its name; if we must follow it through every change of policy and principle, and blindly bow down to its priests, through fear of party heresy; if we dare not stand always upon our honest convictions, regardless of the name under which we battle; if we are not endowed by nature with sense enough to go without being led, and to act without being told; if, finally, name and not principle is the victor in our political struggles, then our Government is a farce, and we the veriest tools in the hands of a few.

Of course, to secure the accomplishment of our convictions, we must associate ourselves with some party; we must yield trivial matters, and enter earnestly into the organization and discipline of that party; we must, because of the different natural endowments in men, have our leaders and advisors. We are under real and great obligations to the party of our choice; we must feel that "union is strength"; but all of these duties are incumbent upon us only so long as that party leads in a line parallel to our political convictions and our sense of political right—our obligations to that party cease the moment they fly the original track. Leaders may palaver of party progress and indulge in hifalutin about change in circumstances demanding change in policy, yet if every individual does not perceive the necessity of that change, if the citizen has not progressed with his party, then he may rest assured that the progress has been in the wrong direction, and that original right is still original right, and that it is his first duty to stand by that, let the party progress to where it will.

It may and it may not be a proud boast in a man to say he has always voted with such a party. If he has, as many have, gone upon the platform when he was pleased with its fair proportions, and, confidently believing that he stood upon hallowed ground, battled so bravely and fearlessly for his principles that, unconsciously, all the old planks have been slipped from under him, until he stands where he never intended to have stood, then he has been grossly deceived, and it lays with himself and is his first duty to himself and country to resume the position he believes to be best for his country; if all men would act thus there would be more patriotism and less corruption at the culminating points of our Government—among the men whom we allow to be rulers among us.

At no time in the history of our country has there been a more favorable moment for independent thinking men to free themselves from party shackles; at no time has there been such an imperative demand made upon patriots to begin anew to exercise the glorious rights of citizenship. Both the old parties are dead, or virtually so—the Whig party has ceased as an organization (though those glorious old conservative principles can never die), and the Democratic party has nothing of its old glory except the empty name—broken and divided in itself and headed by the most weak, vacillating, inconsistent and treacherous administration that ever was lifted to the heights of power on the wave of party victory.

This is, then, indeed a crisis, a momentous one in the history of our great Republic. It becomes men to look about them and to choose honestly where they will next bestow their influence and support. Therefore, let every citizen exercise his understanding, and not betray his proud prerogative. Let every man weigh well the merits of all parties and factions, and, having honestly chosen, let him labor for the cause of his adoption. Above all things else let the new party of independent thinkers be honest, let them be led by honest politicians, men who do not fear to assert principles even in the face of their personal loss of popularity, or in the terror of the wind of favor veering around to some other point of the political compass.

Fellow citizens, the history of the past is before you; from that only can you draw conclusions. Do not fear the epithet of being called turn-coats. It is the parties that have left you, and not you them. Come out from the old rule of iniquity and organize a new power which shall be the exponent of your real views. Stand by that power and fight valiantly as long as it is true to you, and no longer. Care not what its name may be, only see that it has a sound platform upon which you can stand as you stood in the good old days of conservatism.

PROSPECTIVE CREAMERY.

Conditions Point Toward One Being Put in at Sheridan.

C. H. Markham, general freight and passenger agent of the Southern Pacific, returned yesterday morning from Sheridan. He reports that the meeting of the farmers and business men, which was addressed by Dr. Withycombe, of the Agricultural College at Corvallis, and himself, was attended by about 100 people. In accordance with the well-matured plans of the Southern Pacific to encourage the establishment of creameries, Mr. Markham feels very hopeful of success at Sheridan. There was much interest manifested. He said yesterday:

"The work done by Messrs. Ladd and Reed years ago in importing blooded stock has borne fruit to a large extent. There are now plenty of good cows in the vicinity of Sheridan, and these will be directly available for a creamery there. At least 300 cows can be secured within an easy distance. The farmers and business men are all thoroughly alive to the necessity of adopting modern methods of farming, and no doubt the seed sown at the meeting will bear abundant fruit.

"The number and nature of the questions asked Dr. Withycombe, touching upon the construction of silos, methods of preparing ensilage, the feeding of cows and other matters pertaining to the modern system of dairying, showed that the interest of farmers is being awakened."

Mr. Markham says that the work done was all of a preliminary nature. Another meeting is shortly to be called for the appointment of a committee with authority to proceed with the best methods for establishing a plant. There are two or three vacant buildings in Sheridan available. All that is necessary is the purchase of machinery and the hiring of a competent butter-maker.

Oregon enjoys a special advantage over the dairying states of the Middle West in that climatic conditions do not require the construction of special buildings. In the East it is necessary to provide for extremes of heat and cold. In Oregon this expense, which is no inconsiderable item, is avoided.

BUSY DAY'S WORK.

Street Committee Considers Many Matters.

An ordinance requesting another franchise for the Oregon Telephone & Telegraph Company, which was said to embody franchises issued heretofore to the company, was presented to the committee on streets of the Common Council at the biweekly meeting held yesterday. No action was taken, as the members of the committee desired further time to consider the provisions contained in the new ordinance. The company was desirous to have the question passed on at an early date so that the work of laying conduits to the new building going up at Park and Alder streets might commence as soon as practicable. Consideration of the question was postponed until Tuesday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, when an adjourned meeting will be held especially for this purpose. The members of the committee on streets are anxious to have all the Councilmen present at this meeting, that a general discussion may be had. If the ordinance is granted, the telephone company proposes to lay an underground conduit from the new building south on Park to Mill, and thence east on Mill to Front street, thus picking up all the overhead wires coming in from the south between Park and the river and putting them beneath the ground from Mill to Alder.

A petition for the improvement of Alder street with wooden blocks was presented, which was signed by about 6000 feet of the property affected, out of a total of 34,000 feet, between Sixth and Lownsdale streets, the termini. It was stated to the committee that another petition was being circulated for an asphalt pavement for the same distance, instead of the wooden blocks; and, to give all petitions time to get prepared, the matter was laid over for two weeks. The only remonstrance was from the First Presbyterian Church, but a rumor was current that sufficient of the large property interests not represented on the petition would appear in a remonstrance in time to defeat the effort.

After a lively discussion the committee agreed to recommend the grading of a street through Terwilliger's Park, as an extension of Kelly street. This matter has been urged by the Driving Association, who have been endeavoring to secure a better approach to the White House drive. A. C. Lohmire, J. F. Kerrigan and E. House were the association's committee, and insisted that the association did not want a way through Hood street. Kelly street had been chosen for several reasons, but was not available unless a road could be constructed through the park. City Engineer Chase reported on the matter, giving estimates of the amount of grading necessary. To grade a street 60 feet wide through the park, he thought a large undertaking, and would make too much of a cut on the upper side, therefore he recommended that the road be made only 30 feet wide at that point. Two-thirds of the adjacent property-owners on Kelly street have signed the petition for improvement of that street, work on which will probably be undertaken at the same time as work through the park.

A petition for the improvement of Umatilla avenue between Fourth and Seventh streets was approved by the committee, also one block of Twenty-fourth street, between Glisan and Flanders.

A communication from H. C. Campbell, of the City & Suburban Railway Company, asked for permission to place a plank pavement between the rails of that company's road on Morrison street from Front west as far as excessive traffic and vibrating rails made asphalt impracticable. The communication merely asked that the City & Suburban be given the same privileges in this respect that was given on Fourth and Washington streets. City Engineer Chase said experience had proven it impossible to keep asphalt on the street between the rails, and he recommended that the company be given the privilege of paving with plank. He said there had been some talk when this change was made on Washington street of property-owners' equity interest in the whole pavement, but the matter had never been adjudicated, and would not likely arise in the present instance. The members of the committee recommended that the request be granted, with the condition that the plank pavement consist of two layers of two-inch boards, instead of merely one layer.

GOING TO NOME.

A Dalles Dentist Will Embark in Mining.

Dr. Sidall, a dentist of The Dalles, is in Portland, preparing to take a mining outfit to Cape Nome. He and Captain J. Morrison, of this city, will erect a steam pumping plant with which to supply a set of sluice-boxes on that portion of Nome beach where Captain Hamilton made $46 a day with a simple rocker last Summer. Dr. Sidall is therefore sanguine of making a big thing this year, as the plant to be taken there will do the work of 10 men, thus saving $460 per day, less the wages of a couple of hands who will assist in running the outfit.

Dr. Sidall, who is 68 years of age, looks forward to this trip as an enjoyable Summer picnic. "I have provided myself with a modern tent and all the paraphernalia necessary to man's comfort," he said at the Perkins yesterday, "and the only work I will do will be to take care of the amalgam as it is taken from riffles, burlaps and plates of our machinery. I have been in the far North twice, and I know there is nothing to be afraid of up there in the Summer time. As I have no family, there will be no one to worry over my absence from home, and all the chances I take are in my favor. I made no money on my two former trips North, but in the third attempt lies the charm."

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

"Quo Vadis?" at the Marquam Friday and Saturday.

The great scenic production of "Quo Vadis?" will come to the Marquam Friday and Saturday instead of Tuesday and Wednesday, as announced yesterday. The company is an excellent one, and has played to crowded houses everywhere. A special Saturday matinee will be given.

MR. TRESCOTT'S DIVORCE.

His Wife Says It Was Not on Account of Her Going on the Stage.

Mrs. Virginia Drew Trescott, whose husband, Charles B. Trescott, manager of the Trescott Packing Company, secured a divorce from her in Portland a few days ago, states that the reason was not that she had adopted the stage as a profession, unknown to Mr. Trescott. Her version of the grounds for divorce were given to a reporter by Mrs. Trescott last night, prior to her leaving for San Francisco.

"Yes, Mr. Trescott secured a divorce, but my going upon the stage had nothing whatever to do with it. You see I have been out of this state over one year, and the Judge was not informed of the letters I have from Mr. Trescott, telling me to remain in California. Neither did he know that I had drawn on Mr. Trescott for funds to return home with and that Mr. Trescott had dishonored the draft. The Judge might not have granted the divorce had all these points been revealed to him. Mr. Trescott insisted that either I take a divorce or give him one without a contest, and no mention was to be made of my stage work. He made no charges against me except extravagance. Before I consented to give him a divorce my attorney had in his possession a letter promising a certain lump sum to be paid to me in case Mr. Trescott obtained the divorce. Inasmuch as both Mr. Trescott and Mr. Frank M. Warren positively declared that he, Mr. Trescott, did not own any stock in the Trescott Packing Company and received only a salary of $100 a month, I could not accept Mr. Trescott as security for the promised sum; so Mr. Warren kindly signed it, thus becoming personally responsible for its payment. Our living greatly exceeded that sum, but it seems Mr. Warren advanced Mr. Trescott sufficient funds to cover all our expenses. My being in California so much since our marriage was due entirely to Mr. Trescott, he insisting that I could not live in this climate. Certainly he was aware of my studies—his letters to me prove that.

"Was the San Francisco article quoted from correct? It was a creation of a reporter's most vivid imagination. I am not willing to pose as a stage-struck woman, who deserted husband and home. I had no home to desert. I seriously object to being called a Christian Scientist, hypnotist, theosophist, etc. I am an omniverous reader, and told the reporter so, but I dislike quackery in any profession. I enjoyed my San Francisco engagement very much, and I had several good offers after that terminated, but, as Mr. Trescott had written forbidding me to continue, I refused them all. Four months ago Mr. Trescott discontinued my allowances and in February I came to Portland, hoping to effect a quiet settlement. I thought I had succeeded beautifully until your paper quite convinced me differently. My plans, well, really, they are indefinite. I shall remain in San Francisco some little time, then on to New York, by way of the Isthmus. I cannot say enough in praise of the San Francisco people. They are ever willing and anxious to encourage and assist any one who shows talent and willingness to work. They have been more than kind to me, and I shall work unceasingly to justify fully their confidence in my dramatic ability.

"I would like to take this opportunity of thanking my Portland friends for their kind consideration of me. To be sure, some supposed friends have proven very deficient. It is quite different being a supposed rich man's wife and being a poor woman, striving for success in a chosen profession. However, you know the old saying, nothing succeeds like success, and I may possibly achieve success some day."

PUPILS' SONG RECITAL.

Anton Schott and Miss Schucking Contribute to Hospital Fund.

A large and appreciative audience was present at Parsons Hall last night for the Schott-Schucking pupils' recital. If "no encores" had not been the order of the evening, it is safe to say the programme would have been doubled, so friendly and sympathetic was the audience. As it was the first public appearance of many of those who took part, they were naturally somewhat nervous, and therefore in some cases hardly did themselves full justice; but on the whole the programme passed off very smoothly and creditably, without any breaks. A large number of the performers received beautiful floral tributes.

The opening number was a Schumann quartet, sung with excellent effect by Miss Velguth, Mrs. Cohen, Mr. Belcher and Mr. Vannod. Following this came an enjoyable recitative from "Tannhauser," by the baritone, Mr. Vannod. Miss Anna Rankin, who is the possessor of a sweet soprano, then gave the solo, "Das Veilchen," by Mendelssohn; and Misses Kate and Louise Pittock rendered Kucken's duo, "Treibe, Treibe, Schifflein," with charming effect. Miss Ethel Shea has a voice of delightful quality, as shown by her singing of Sullivan's "Lost Chord," and doubtless it will increase in volume as it is developed. Miss Kate Pittock's work was thoroughly artistic in Schubert's "Du Bist die Ruh," especially her manner of taking high notes. Miss Blanche Breeden has a voice of much promise, if one may judge from her singing of Weber's "Cavatine Freischutz." Miss Carrie May put much prayer-like beauty into "Gebet Elisabeth," and William Belcher, one of Portland's best tenors, gave the aria from Mendelssohn's "St. Paul," "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death and I Will Give Thee a Crown of Life." The most dramatic number of the evening was Mrs. Eleanor Ross' impassioned rendering of "Dich Theure Halle," from "Tannhauser," a heavy, difficult thing. The programme closed with the beautiful quartet from "Martha," by Miss Velguth, Mrs. Cohen, Mr. Belcher and Mr. Vannod. Miss Schucking played the accompaniments with her usual spirit and good taste. The door receipts went to swell the building fund of Good Samaritan Hospital.
