CRYSTAL WEDDING.

Delightfully Conducted Out-of-Town Social Function.

Dr. and Mrs. E. Barton Pickel celebrated the 15th anniversary of their wedding on Monday evening at their beautiful home in Medford, and over 100 of their friends enjoyed the happy occasion with them. The handsome, spacious grounds were lighted by innumerable Japanese lanterns, and the entire house was ablaze with electric lights. On the verandas, inclosed with draperies and made cozy with rugs and couches, the lights were softly subdued. The entrance hall and all of the second story was adorned with graceful arrangements of English ivy and many vases of choice cut flowers. The drawing-room and all of the rooms on the first floor were decorated with festoons and ropes of sweetbrier, interspersed with artistically arranged clusters of snowballs, and further embellished with glittering cut-glass bowls and slender vases of choice roses, a different variety for every room.

Dr. and Mrs. Pickel received their friends under a mass of snowy blossoms. They were assisted in entertaining by Mesdames W. I. Vawter, I. A. Webb, E. N. Warner and N. G. Wortman and a bevy of young women. An elaborate and sumptuous supper was served at large and small tables, brilliantly lighted, and prettily arranged, under the trees on the lawn. The floral decorations of the tables were entirely of sweet peas. The favors were dainty hearts, tied with lovers' knots. Many elegant and valuable presents were received.

FAMOUS FERRIS WHEEL.

Passing of Greatest Engineering Freak of the Century.

When the Ferris wheel is sent to the scrap heap—a thing likely soon to happen, says the Chicago Evening Post—the greatest engineering vagary of the century will have passed into that oblivion reserved for fads, flying machines and perpetual motion contrivances. Not that the great Ferris wheel is any of these, but simply because it never could serve any practical use, because it embodies no distinctly new principle in engineering, and because it has a marvellous faculty of emptying the coffers of those who try to make its huge bulk earn even a small cost of maintaining it—to say nothing of the cost of original investment.

As one of the wonders of the World's Fair of 1893—perhaps the chief wonder—the Ferris wheel stood unique. Its great size, marvellous construction and distinct novelty made it not only the crowning feature of the Midway, but the gossip of four continents. During the continuance of the exposition more than 1,500,000 visitors from all quarters of the globe rode in its suspended cars, and from a height of 264 feet caught a birdseye glimpse of the fairgrounds, the lake and the distant city.

Though less than a third the height of the Eiffel Tower, of the Paris exposition, the Ferris wheel was a much greater wonder. The Eiffel tower was merely a continuous projection of successive towers one upon another. Given a suitable base, its construction simply meant the stringing of iron and steel straight into the air. But in the Ferris wheel something new in construction was accomplished—new because of its great size.

Conception of Genius.

It was the projection of a gigantic circle, carrying thousands of tons of steel and iron suspended from an axle and readily movable by the application of machinery. To have built the Ferris wheel simply to stand upon its periphery would have been a comparatively simple task. To suspend this mass of metal from a central point and give it motion was the conception of genius.

Eiffel and his engineeres were three years building the tower in Paris. The Ferris wheel was constructed and carrying passengers within four months. The idea of erecting this great wheel came to George Washington Gale Ferris, a native of Illinois, and an engineer for the Pittsburg Iron Company, about a year before the opening of the World's Fair. Mr. Ferris was then known as one of the most expert bridge builders in America, if not in the world, but when his scheme was mentioned to other engineers it was promptly pronounced chimerical. Some went even so far as to laugh at it, and not one dreamed the project ever would get beyond the speculative stage. But Mr. Ferris was persistent, and, besides, had faith in himself. Courageously he set to work and succeeded in interesting sufficient capital to warrant him in ordering material for the wheel.

About $25,000 was spent in plans, tests, etc., before the actual construction of the wheel began. Some 30 firms took part in its making, and a Chicago firm saw to its erection. When ready to be turned the Ferris wheel had cost $382,000, and had consumed about 8,000,000 pounds of iron and steel. The movable part of it weighed 4,200,000 pounds, and it required two engines of 1000 horsepower each to keep it turning. And so nicely adjusted were all the parts, so well balanced was the great steel circle with its 36 cars, capable of carrying 2160 persons, that it was under as full control as a sewing machine or a pony engine. Once or twice during the World's Fair the motive power needed adjustment, but the only results so far as the public was concerned were humorous incidents, which gave the newspaper men a few columns of anything but dull reading matter.

It is barely possible that, had the world's fair lasted a year or two, the Ferris wheel might have paid for itself. This is based on the assumption that it would have continued to be a novelty for 12 months or more. As it was, the gross earnings of the wheel during the fair were $312,000. About one-fifth of this went to the stockholders as profits. The power necessary to operate the big wheel would have run a cotton factory of 100,000 spindles and 3000 looms, and employing 5000 operatives. The boilers of the power plant consumed coal like an ocean liner. No other single feature of the exposition represented such an expenditure of energy.

But the fair lasted only six months, and the Ferris wheel ceased paying dividends with the closing of the exposition gates. Had it gone from its place on the Midway direct to the scrap pile or to Coney Island, as was at one time suggested, more than one Chicagoan would have been some thousands of dollars richer today. The wheel that was such a drawing card on the shores of Lake Michigan, where the surroundings were somewhat proportioned to its size, was moved to the north side of the city and placed in a space so small that the cars hung over other property while the wheel was revolving.

There it has turned occasionally for the last few years, eating up coal, piling up cost, an eyesore to its owners. What has the big wheel cost to date? Deducting the sum paid to stockholders during the world's fair, and counting as part of the cost what it has lost to its owners, it is safe to say that $1,000,000 will not cover the total. To move it from Jackson Park to the North Side cost alone $175,000, and it is figured it will require an expenditure of at least $25,000 to take it down and remove it from where is now stands.

The Organ-Grinder.

Beside the curb, out in the street,
The organ-grinder stands,
With stubbles on his swarthy face
And very dirty hands.
And while you curse him plays away
Like twenty German bands.

The rag-time airs you gayly hummed
A year or two ago,
Forth from the box he wheels around
In jangling torrents flow—
The waltzes always hard and fast,
The marches mild and slow.

I often think Pandora must
Have chanced along one day,
And opened up the box the first
Poor Dago had to play,
And thus ungraciously let all
But discord get away.

It means no moisture in the provision chamber; therefore no mixing of food flavors. THE "AUTOMATIC" has perfect circulation, no flues to become musty, and the interior practically one large compartment with all parts easy of access. EVERY "AUTOMATIC" REFRIGERATOR positively guaranteed to WORK PERFECTLY. 14 sizes, from $12.60 UP.

An Important Improvement

In Dunlop Tires has been made. It consists of a flap of fabric fastened to one edge of the outer cover. When the tire is in position this flap extends across the rim, affording an artificial bed in which the tube may lie without danger of being punctured by protruding spoke ends.

Over 100 manufacturers are supplying Dunlop Tires on their wheels—certainly a strong endorsement.
