

The Gird Junete.
Over the meadows he walked one day—
Oh, it was in the merry Junete!
And through the daisies she came that way—
Glad is the heart in the Junete!
Her lips like a flower, her eyes a star,
And her hair a chain in which gold gleams are;
At first she was cold and she looked afar—Sing hey for the glad Junete!

Then hand in hand through the dusk they trod—Oh, it was in the tender Junete!
Light was her foot on the yielding sod—Glad is the heart in the Junete!
Never a word to him she said,
And she held aside her little head;
When he sought her eyes her cheek grew red—Sing hey for the glad Junete!

Here let us rest 'neath the budding bough—Oh, it was in the lovely Junete!
A jug and a loaf and a song and a vow—
Glad is the heart in the Junete!
Landlord, bring us your best good cheer—Life is short and the June is here; Love is sweet in the fresh young year—Sing hey for the glad Junete!

"What dost thou like, fair maid?" said he—
Oh, it was in the merry Junete!
She was a maid that was fair to see—
Glad is the heart in the Junete!
Shead that was plucked and the gay cold clam,
A jug that was cold and the good sam, Strawberries—she didn't give a play—Sing hey for the glad Junete!

Violet, haste with the chaste crisp check—
Oh, it was in the tender Junete!
She came like a birdlet at his beck—Glad is the heart in the Junete!
His heart grew cold and his lips were dumb,
His eyes got stern and his limbs went numb, And I can tell you, I loved him some—Sing hey for the glad Junete!

AND NE'ER A MAN ABOUT

Mothers Lament Death of Cavaliers and Belle of Three Seasons Explains—Dull Week.

"Oh, what is the matter," the matron sighed,
"With the men of today, you know?
When I was a maid I had cavaliers Wherever I wanted to go;
And theater tickets, and dances, and drives,
And picnics, and flowers—oh, dear!
To think of them and contrast it with now—It does seem decidedly queer."

"Here are my daughters, three beautiful girls, All most carefully groomed and gowned You'll see them, in groups with others as well, And with never a man around."

"I take them to concerts; they sit in a row, Their beauty adorns the parquet;
But the men who should marry, and won't,
You know."

"Don't even glance over our way."
"It is the fault of the girls themselves," declared the Belle of Three Seasons, "though the mothers are not altogether guiltless. Now, I haven't a doubt that the 'matron' you mention has made the mistake of the age, and is too short-sighted to see it."

"Indeed," I said, "But she is one of many. It would surprise you, perhaps, to know that at least half a dozen women, prominent in the social circle you so well adorn, have asked me to say something on this very subject. It seems true that, so far as the city is concerned, the age of chivalry is dead, and yet there were never so many bright, beautiful, thoroughly educated and intellectually em-anipated young women in society as there are today."

"That is just the point," she cried, with charming animation. "Too much intellectual emancipation—too much education!
No man wants to marry an encyclopaedia of universal knowledge, or a modern Minerva."

"And yet," I ventured, with a meaning glance at the ring which had recently come to encircle the third finger of her shapely left hand, "you are yourself of that class."

She laughed and blushed. "But he doesn't know it," she said. "He thinks I am a dear little goose, quite incapable of thinking of myself, and utterly dependent upon him for intellectual stimulus. No, my friend, three years' experience in society has taught me something, and it may be all summed up in this:

He Mustn't Know It.

"The girl of today is man's intellectual equal; she knows quite as much as her brother, but, until she learns to conceal the fact and pose as a clinging vine, she will not be greatly in demand as wife or sweetheart. You must make a man believe you look up to and depend upon him before you can ever hope to hold his interest. It is easy enough, if you only know how."

"But is it not well, just the least bit hypocritical, you know?"

"Not at all. Aro, no! not scripturally admonished to be 'wise as serpents'?"

"Well, to go back to the beginning. I do wish you people who have nothing to do but amuse yourselves would be a little more active and give me something to say."

"Oh! but we are the busiest people on earth. And as for amusing ourselves—you don't dream what a bore it is sometimes.
But let me see! There is the hop at the Bishop Scott Academy—however, that has been postponed till next Friday. Mrs.
S. G. Wheeler's tea comes too late for this week's letter. I am afraid, and, really, there's been very little worth mentioning."

"You might dilate on the Governor's wedding. That ought to be of vital interest, particularly as the bride-to-be is young, talented, beautiful and all that.
Salem society will take a new lease on life next season, I imagine, with such a charming leader in prospect."

"But that is for another time," I replied.

Wednesday Night Club's Dance.

The Wednesday Night Club gave its last dance for the season at Burkhard Hall last week. There was a good attendance and the decorations were pretty and appropriate.

There was a charming luncheon given early in the week, at which Mrs. Trunkey, of Chicago, Miss Ella Doyle, of New York, and Miss Maud Miller, of Oakland, Cal., were the guests of honor. Mrs.
Trunkay and Miss Doyle, who are visiting the Pacific Northwest for the first time, found much to delight them in Oregon.

"Do you know," remarked Miss Doyle,
"that I have seen nothing more charming than the fashion that prevails in Portland of carrying baskets—dainty willow affairs, usually filled with flowers. I am going to try to start the basket habit in New York when I return."

And that's all. This week—well, this is only the first day. AGATHA.

MATRIMONIAL ALLIANCES.

Weddings of the Week in Portland and at Other Points.

Married, at the home of the bride's parents, Hon. and Mrs. Philip Metcalf, corner of State and Twelfth streets, Salem, at 8:30 P. M. Wednesday, June 7, Miss Ellie Sweetser to H. J. Lorentzen, of Winemucca, Nevada.
Rev. H. A. Ketchum, of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. The wedding was a particularly pretty one, every detail having been carried out in a pleasing manner and the house having been converted into a lower of flowers and potted palms and other choice plants. The floral decorations were everywhere and presented a very attractive spectacle. The bride wore a soft lilac veil, and the bride was exquisitely gowned, in soft sheer white organdy, over white silk, trimmed in rich point lace insertion and edge. She wore a soft lilac veil, and she was attended by Miss Maud Mackay, who was daintily gowned in white orga-

Seventh street, George S. Rondebush and Carrie Matlock, Rev. William S. Gilbert officiating. Mr. Rondebush is a commodore of this city, and Miss Matlock was a resident of Eugene, Mr. and Mrs. Rondebush expect to spend several weeks at the Coast and will then make their home at Tacoma. The partials of the Roberts' home were prettily decorated for the wedding with arches of evergreen and flowers, and under the mellow light of candles, they presented a pleasing effect. The bride was dressed in gray foulard silk and carried white carnations.
Miss Bertha Matlock, of Portland, was bridesmaid, and Mr. O. W. Griffin, of Eugene, was best man. At 6 o'clock, the company adjourned to the Portland, for a wedding dinner.

Cunningham-Driscoll.

At 2 P. M. last Thursday afternoon, a fashionable wedding was celebrated at St.
Patrick's church, the contracting parties being Mr. J. S. Cunningham and Miss Katie Driscoll, both residents of the parish.
The two younger sisters of the bride acted as bridesmaid and maid of honor, respectively, and their brother, John James Driscoll, as escort of honor to the party.
The bride was attired in plain white silk, and the bridesmaid in pink and blue. The main altar of the sanctuary was one blaze of lighted tapers, and the altar was laden with choice flowers. Mrs. J. E. Owens presided at the organ, and sang "Ave Maria." Rev. Father Desmarais officiated, and pronounced the nuptial blessing.
There were about 200 people present. Mr.
Cunningham and his bride left that evening on a wedding tour to San Francisco.

Dahn-Troster.

David Dahn and Eske Troster were united in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Rabenick, 683 Second street, on Wednesday evening, June 6, by Rev. H. Hoyt.
Only the immediate family were present.
Mr. and Mrs. Dahn will make their future home at 633 Second street.

Dunnagan-Tompkins.

Tuesday evening, June 5, at the home of

THE SWEET GIRL GRADUATE.

HER OLD FRIENDS BID HER FAREWELL.

die over Bon Silens pink. Miss Lillian Metcalf performed the bridal chorus from Lohengrin. A sumptuous menu was provided in the dining-room. The young couple left Thursday evening for their new home in Nevada.

Rondebusch-Matlock.

Married, on Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, at the home of A. A. Roberts, 219 the bride's parents, 257 East Thirty-fourth street, Charles Dunnagan and Miss Grace Tompkins were united in marriage. Rev.

G. A. Taggart, pastor of the Mississippi Avenue Congregational Church officiating.
The bride was attired in white organdy, and carried white carnations. The attendants were Ernest Simmons and Miss Pearl Montag. There were 90 guests at the ceremony. Numerous presents were children early in the week to join Major Freeman, at Morganstown, W. Va., where he is superintending Government improvements of the Monongahela River.

Mrs. S. G. Hadley, of Cape Horn, visited her daughter, Miss Jessie, this week.

Miss Margaret Rose left Thursday evening for a visit with relatives at Hillsdale.

Miss Carrie Millsap, of the State Baptist Missionary Society, returned on received. The new couple will be at home after June 30, at 602 Kerby street, East Side.

Henderson-McIntosh.
Mr. John Henderson was united in marriage, in Starbuck, Wash., to Miss Bella McIntosh, daughter of J. W. McIntosh, proprietor of the Starbuck grist mill of that place, on Wednesday of last week.
The ceremony was performed by Rev.
William Kirkby, pastor at large of the presbytery of Walla Walla. The bride and groom left the same evening for Portland, to spend their honeymoon.

IN AND ABOUT PORTLAND.

Entertainments and Social Events

Here and Elsewhere.

On the evening of the 9th inst., the alumni of St. Mary's Academy and College assembled to welcome the members of the class of 1900. Miss A. Dimick, president of the alumnae, introduced the young ladies, the Misses Lucie Dooly, Edith Reilly, Mary Lightner, Birdie Hollingworth, May King, Irene Dunning, Francis O'Leary, Marie Murphy, Cordelia Murphy and Nellie Cain. The address of welcome was given by Miss Esther Krueger, class of '99, and the response by Miss Cordelia Murphy, class of 1900. Selections by the St. Mary's Orchestra were well received. Archbishop Christie addressed the association, emphasizing the necessity for educating heart and mind. After the president had replied to him, the alumnae were presented to his grace, and a pleasant evening ended.

An enjoyable event occurred on Decoration Day, when a party of young people, numbering 13, left Portland for the Sandy River, 17 miles distant, in a "lally-ho." A delicious lunch was taken along, and they spent a pleasant day in the woods.
Those present were: The Misses Nina Killingsworth, Ada Schloff, Hattie Wood, Frances Hessel, Parthenia Dulehart, Erle Shorno, Alice Killingsworth and Lela Goddard, and Messrs. William Killings-worth, Jr., Clinton Shorno, Clyde Hanwalt, Temple Alexander, Timothy Wood, Bill Bennett, H. E. Wood, Fred McCarver and Oliver Cutler. The chaperon was Mrs. John Alexander.

Mrs. N. B. Pendleton, of Brooklyn, invited several of her friends to her home Tuesday evening last, to witness the opening of a night-blooming cereus. The cereus commenced to open about 8 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock was in full bloom. It was pure white and very fragrant, and measured 12½ inches in diameter. The following morning it was closed.

An enjoyable farewell surprise party was given to Captain Charles Haster's daughters, the Misses Maud and May, Wednesday, last. The young ladies will soon take their departure for California, where they will make their future home.

Camp H. entertained the Ladies Auxiliary on Wednesday evening, June 6. The attendance was large and enthusiastic.
There were cards, music and refreshments, and congratulations were extended to Assistant Captain McDonnell.

Was Distinction at Yale.

Among the winners of the Townsend prizes, in the senior class at Yale, is Mr. J. Harry Klosterman, son of Mr. John Klosterman, a well-known and highly respected resident of Portland, and whose essay on "Edwin Booth" was selected for recognition from the efforts of 23 competitors. The winning of the honor puts Mr. Klosterman on this year's list of De-Forest speakers, of whom there are six qualified to compete for the $500 gold medal, to be contested for on the 22nd inst., at the New Haven University. The young man has made an excellent record since his enrollment among the Yale students, having won, among other distinctions, a second scholarship in his junior year.
