

CENSUS-TAKERS FINISH

ALL CITY DISTRICTS, EXCEPT A FEW LARGE ONES, COMPLETED.

Telephone the Superintendent if Omitted—One Man Who Forgot His Mother-in-Law.

According to the law, census-taking in Portland was completed last night. As a matter of fact, all of the districts were not completed, and the work will be finished this week. This is allowed under special instructions from Washington.

There were four or five districts in Portland which were too large, and it was found impossible to complete them in the allotted time.

Most of the districts are completed, yet if any one in Portland has been omitted they can get their names on the list by telephoning Grant 1431.

The city superintendent thinks that the work of the enumerators has been well done, yet he realizes that it is possible for some to have been missed, and he is anxious that all should be properly entered before the returns are sent to Washington.

Many persons called at the supervisor's office last week to say that they had not seen a census man this year. It was found in most cases that the enumerator had found them in some way, and had them on his list. Sometimes the name had been obtained through the hotel clerk or landlady where the man roomed. In other cases it had been given by his employer. A few were found to be genuine omissions, and the supervisor was glad to have the names entered on his book.

There were several instances where the head of the family forgot to give in all the names at his house.

An East Side man called on the city superintendent the other day and informed him that the enumerator had missed him. He then gave his own name and those of his wife and baby. When they had been properly entered he started to go. When he reached the door he stopped, thought a moment and returned.

"Excuse me," he said, "but I forgot to give you the names of my father-in-law, mother-in-law and the servant."

These names were put down and again the man prepared to leave the office.

"You are sure that is all?" asked the enumerator.

"No, it isn't," said the man. "My wife's niece lives with us, too. I had forgotten her."

The girl's name was entered, and the man went his way. The superintendent thinks that if there were many as careful as this man Portland's population may not show up as well as it might.

While the city's census is practically taken now, it will be several days before the figures will be made public. All such figures must be sent out from Washington City. The supervisors of the various districts are not allowed to give out any such information.

Census-taking will continue in the smaller towns and in the country until June 20. The only three towns in Oregon required to complete the work in 15 days were Portland, Astoria and Salem.

No one will know what these towns figure up until the report is sent out from Washington. That will be done just as soon as the footings can be made and verified.

GOOD CRICKET MATCH.

Multnomah Again Wins, by a Score of 52 to 31.

The return cricket match was played between the Multnomah and the British ships Lizzie Bell, Plymouth, Gaige and Wendur and an eleven selected from the M. A. C. yesterday afternoon. Owing to the unsettled weather the game did not commence until after 3 o'clock. Notwithstanding this, owing to the fine bowling of Cawston and Lawrence, backed up by smart fielding, the Multnomahs retired the visitors for 31 runs. Barr played a dashing innings for 9, and played it freely for 9. In the Multnomah innings, Barrfoot quickly ran up a score of 24. Lawrence was not out with 14, and Pattullo played his usual pretty game for 6. Barr bowled very well, indeed, for the sailors, and kept a fine length all through, capturing five wickets for very few runs. Spratt bowled well, but had no luck. Guy got one wicket with a regular "hoppy" delivery. Multnomah's innings was closed with seven wickets down for 31. Barr, Overtufter and Scott did not bat.

The next game will be against a combined team of sailors and unattached against the strongest team Multnomah can produce. The following are the complete scores:

British ships—
Barr.....	Stumped Pattullo, bowled Spratt.....
Spratt.....	Bowled Cawston.....

BELIEVES IN PROPAGATION.

Fish Commission Agent on the Salmon Industry.

W. A. Wilcox, agent of the United States Fish Commission, returned yesterday afternoon from Astoria, where he had been looking over the condition of the salmon industry. Mr. Wilcox is connected with the commercial branch of the commission which deals in statistics and state of the industry. He is a firm believer in artificial propagation, as he says the art of hatching fish is no longer an experiment, its utility having been verified long ago on the Atlantic coast, where shad and codfish have been propagated for years.

He thinks the shad in the Columbia River has been treated very badly, as they are a most edible fish, and yet thousands of them have been thrown away by the fishers for salmon every year. He was treated to some earned shad down the river on Thursday, and thinks no fish could taste any better while the fish is solid and free of bones.

"On the Potomac," he said, "the Government propagates 300,000 shad every season and thus keeps up a good supply. He will remain in Oregon a few weeks."

PLAYED BALL IN THE RAIN

WET FINISH TO MULTNOMAH-CALIFORNIA GAME.

Visitors Won by a Score of 13 to 4—Good Contest Until the Skies Wept on It.

The Californians were again victorious over the Multnomahs at Multnomah Field by a score of 13 to 4. For the first seven innings the game was a rather. Plenty of good hitting, sharp fielding and all-around good baseball marked this portion of the game. A missing rain set in just as the game was called at 1:30; not enough wet to prevent playing, but just sufficient to lubricate the ball and to make the pitcher's job a hard one. Fair weather prevailed until the seventh inning, when a heavy shower set in, and from that time on until the end of the game interest began to flag.

The California boys held a campmeeting in Umpire Rankin's neighborhood at the end of the seventh, but all their blarneying failed to get them a win.

Mrs. James W. Welch

NEW GRAND PRESIDENT OF THE NATIVE DAUGHTERS OF OREGON.

Mrs. James W. Welch, of Astoria, the newly elected grand president of the Native Daughters, who is a native Oregonian, and a woman of good executive ability, culture, and possessing a charming personality. The choice of Mrs. Welch for grand president will stimulate the order which has made such rapid progress during the past year. The club at Astoria was named for Mrs. Welch's mother, Nancy Welch, one of the oldest pioneers of the state.

Steel starter, Mr. Tom Healy; timekeeper, Messrs Hulme and Cox.

The first event was the 100 yards dash, and Lawrence Connell surprised everyone by the easy way in which he won. Mackintosh was second and Wilcox third.

The high jump was won by Mackintosh, who jumped five feet one inch. Wilcox was second and Connell third.

The pole vault seemed especially to interest the spectators. Fred Wilcox elicited great applause by the graceful way in which he jumped nine feet. Mackintosh persevered pluckily, and was tied with Connell for second place. Connell won the 40-yard dash in 14-4 seconds. Wilcox put the shot 32 1/2 feet. Connell was second, Van Kuran third. Wilcox won both hurdle races, but Connell and Mackintosh made it interesting for him. Wilcox also outdistanced his competitors in throwing the hammer and in the walking race.

In all, Wilcox scored 35 points, and was therefore awarded the Portland High School Athletic Club gold medal. Connell won the silver medal, with 22 points. Mackintosh made 25 points, and will, doubtless, have a good chance for the gold medal next year. The June class scored in all 37 points, whereas the rest of the school made a total of 62 points. Notwithstanding the rain, no one seemed to regret the afternoon, and it is believed that an impetus has been given to athletics which will cause greater interest to be taken in the careful physical training of the students.

ANXIOUS TO GO HOME.

Business Men Did Not Want to Wait for Native Sons.

The gathering of Pioneers, Native Sons and Daughters and Veterans in Portland last week has brought considerable business to the various railroad running into this city. The visitors have come from all over the state, and each road has taken some pride in giving the good accommodations and a low rate.

At two or three towns along the line of the Southern Pacific coaches were chartered by the various organizations, and the entire party from the locality came to Portland in that way. This was all very nice for both the travelers and the railroad people at first, but the scheme brought its troubles as well as its benefits on these chartered trains were sold at a very low rate, and were only good to return on a certain day, and on the train which the holders had originally chartered. This is where the trouble came in.

The next day after the arrival of a Native Son car from the Valley two or three of the excursionists dropped in at the Southern Pacific office and inquired if they could go home on the regular train that day. They were told that their tickets would not be honored by the conductors on the regular train. They insisted, but in vain. The railroad people were anxious to do anything for the Native Sons that could be done, and while deploring the fact that they could not add those who insisted that they would be compelled to return home at once, they discovered that the ones who were in such a hurry were not Native Sons, but simply persons who had come to Portland on private business, taking advantage of the low rate. They had put on a Native Son look when appealing to the railroad for a concession in the matter of returning out of season, but it failed to work.

PROFIT IN STRAWBERRIES.

Those Shipped From White Salmon Brought Good Prices.

Hood River strawberry-raisers have done well this season, said J. M. Burkett, a strawberry producer, who was in Portland yesterday. Mr. Burkett's field is at White Salmon, Wash., on the opposite side of the Columbia from Hood River, but the berries from that point are sent abroad as the regular Hood River article. The 500 crates shipped this year from White Salmon have netted the producers $2.50 a crate, he says, and those now being shipped from Hood River are netting as high as $3.50.

Hood River berries find a market in Butte, Salt Lake and other cities of the interior. The berries, he says, sell at these points for $4 a crate, and this means that the final consumer must pay 35 cents a box for them. Portland people think strawberries are high when they cost 10 cents a box at the fruit stands.

Berry-picking at White Salmon is mostly done by Indians from the Yakima reservation. Whole families come down from the reservation every season and camp near the berry patches while picking lasts. Squaws and children do the work, and the men lie around and gamble the money earned by the drudgers. Occasionally a man will work some, but this is rare as the squaws have done all the work of the noble red man from time immemorial, and it is hard to induce him to break the rule.
