

ROOSEVELT'S STRENGTH

HIS NOMINATION HELPED THE REPUBLICAN TICKET. No Machine Dictation Could Arouse the Enthusiasm He Did—Source of His Popularity.

WASHINGTON, July 4.—While there cannot be the least doubt of the general satisfaction over the nomination of Governor Roosevelt for the Vice-Presidency on the Republican ticket, yet it is observed on every hand that there is some regret that this position has been forced upon the gallant leader of the Rough Riders...

Looking Forward. But when the Governor Roosevelt looks forward and sees his future during the next Administration, he cannot but sympathize with the Vice-Presidential nomination. He will be glad to see a man in the White House who will have no opportunity to express his views on a subject where his energies will necessarily be coupled up, where he will have no right to opinions...

and has to undergo the horrible humiliation of finding out that he is not much of anybody in the great national capital. As a matter of fact, a man might write "M. C." after his name forever and a day in Washington, and if he had no other claim to distinction he would never be noticed. To be "somebody" he has got to do something. There are so many members of Congress running loose in this city during the sessions that they are a common sight, and never excite the least interest or comment.

This characteristic of nonentity is further intensified by the fact that there are so many men of distinction in Washington whose rank and claim to distinction is so far above that of an M. C. An instance of how this works is recalled of a member who took his seat for the first time at the beginning of the present Congress. One day he was introduced at his hotel to one of the leading correspondents in Washington who had a widespread reputation as a newspaper editor and writer. They exchanged pleasantries and parted.

TO THE PARIS EXPOSITION

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED FROM A MODERN TAPESTRY. The following day they crossed paths, but the newspaper man failed to recognize the new Congressman, and failed to speak. This was repeated day after day, until finally the M. C. asked a friend "what sort of a chump that newspaper man was, and if he really had any standing."

CHINA AND THE CHURCH

BISHOP CRANSTON TO SPEAK ON TROUBLED PROBLEM. Both Taylor-Street and First Congregational Churches Have Similar Topics—Church News.

Bishop Earl Cranston will deliver his already famous address on China at the Taylor-Street Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday morning. It need not be said that China is now the center of attraction in the minds of the world. Bishop Cranston has recently returned from a two years' stay in this land. He was there to study all the conditions of religious life, and will be able to make such a statement as will be of great interest to all the people.

First Congregational. At the First Congregational Church, the pastor, Rev. Arthur W. Ackerman, will preach both morning and evening. The morning topic will be "Christian Liberty." In the evening there will be a discussion of "The Present Crisis in China." Nothing of greater interest to the average Christian or other than a Christian has happened in recent years than the awakening of the great nation to the west of us.

First Baptist. At the First Baptist, corner Twelfth and Taylor streets, Alexander Blackburn, D. D., pastor, today, the pastor of this church and the Grace Methodist Church will begin and continue through August. During July the meetings will be held at the church, and Dr. Blackburn will be in charge. In August the order will be reversed, and Dr. Atchinson will be pastor. Sunday schools, young people's meetings, and other services will be held at the church.

Sunnyside Congregational. The Sunnyside School of the Sunnyside Congregational Church convenes at 10 A. M., under the superintendence of Dr. M. A. Jones. The pastor, Rev. J. J. Staub, will preach both morning and evening, taking for his subject at the morning service, "Soul-thirst and Its Satisfaction." The theme of the evening will be, "The Angel of Divine Guidance."

United Brethren. Services at the United Brethren Church, corner East Ninth and Mill streets, Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. The pastor, Rev. W. P. Hogg, of Chicago, Ill., will preach at the Free Methodist Church, corner East Ninth and Mill streets, Sunday at 11 A. M. and 7:30 P. M.

Very Mean of Her. The following day they crossed paths, but the newspaper man failed to recognize the new Congressman, and failed to speak. This was repeated day after day, until finally the M. C. asked a friend "what sort of a chump that newspaper man was, and if he really had any standing."

The following provisions have been made for services during his absence: Rev. Clapp, of Forest Grove, will have charge of the first week; Rev. Rowley, state superintendent of Sunday schools, will conduct services the second Sunday, and Rev. Gray, superintendent of city missions, has consented to occupy the pulpit the third Sunday of Mr. Staub's absence.

THE COLUMBIA RIVER DRYDOCK.

The Navy Department is losing no time in the preparations for constructing a new drydock on the Columbia River, and when the report of the special board appointed to locate the site for the dock is received and approved, work will be begun at once on the Columbia River, most important work. The department is desirous of making this dock one of the most approved patterns, that will be able to accommodate all the vessels of the Pacific Coast, and which will have an opportunity to get up the Columbia River. The officials in charge of the work recognize the many advantages of a dock on the Columbia River, most important work, which is the fresh water harbor, which in itself will be of great assistance in cleaning the bottoms of all vessels that come to the dock, and which will be situated sufficiently far from the sea to give all the advantages of a fresh-water cleansing before the dock is reached.

THE STATE'S NEW BUILDING.

After a stage of over three crammed and uncomfortable quarters, the Washington Evening Star, the leading afternoon paper of the Capital City, has moved into a new home, which has handsomely earned the distinction of being the finest and best equipped newspaper office in the world. The Star building is a massive structure of white marble, rising in splendor from the Postoffice building, where it stands one of the finest blocks in the City of Washington. A fitting description of the building would take columns, but suffice it to say that those who have visited it, and are familiar with such edifices, pronounce it the most elaborately equipped newspaper office in the world. The Star proper will occupy but a portion of the building, having the ground floor for its editorial office and counting room, while the seventh floor is taken up by the editorial and reporters' rooms, where the real newspaper branch of the work will be conducted. On the top floor are the composing rooms, with the most improved typesetting-machines, stereotyping outfits, and everything required to make the Star a model paper typographically, as it is editorially. The Associated Press will occupy an entire floor of the new building, and various newspaper correspondents are expected to take quarters in other parts of the building.

CONGRESSMEN ARE COMMON.

A member of Congress always comes to Washington a bigger man than he returns at the expiration of his first term in office, although some, learning their lesson, brush up and afterwards make names for themselves. As a general thing, when a man is first elected to Congress he feels that for once in his life he is somebody, and in fact he is a somebody at least in his own district. But the worst of it is that he brings the same feeling with him to Washington,

THE YEARBOOK.

One of the most useful publications prepared by the Government and distributed by Congressmen and Senators is the Yearbook of the Department of Agriculture. This book has grown from a volume of 200 to 300 pages, to a huge volume of nearly 500 pages. Originally the Agricultural Department's other departments, printed only the annual report of the Secretary, but now the Secretary's report is included in the Yearbook, together with all the other reports of the various subjects which come under the observation of the Agricultural Department, some of which are local, one section of the country, and some to another, as an effort is made to have the Yearbook cover industries in all sections. Aside from these are subjects of general interest such as agricultural education, plant and animal diseases, soil investigations, road building problems and dairy developments. One of the interesting papers is the "Forest in the United States," by Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the Forester of the Department. Aside from these are other papers on the various subjects of agriculture and dairy questions are taken up, and many valuable hints given on each. In fact, almost every conceivable question concerning plants and plant life, soils, and animals is discussed in some new way, and some new light is thrown on each subject by writers who have made particular study of the respective questions. Each of the papers is written by a man who has a large quota of these documents placed to his credit, but so great is the demand that Oregon farmers and cattlemen who desire to secure copies should make application at once to insure getting the Yearbook.

TOURS OF INSPECTION.

It is about this season of every year that Government officials look about them to see if there is not some condition under their paternalistic division of Department that requires inspection in order to insure a full knowledge of existing conditions at headquarters that cannot be obtained in any way but by personal investigation. And it is not usually a hard matter to find some condition in a pleasant part of the country that needs to be looked into. It may be there is some difficulty being experienced in the Yellowstone Park that needs inspection. If so, there is an opportunity for some high official to draw on the Government for the expense of a trip to that point, and incidentally to take an "long-needed rest from arduous duties in Washington." Then, it will be recalled, the Industrial Commission found that conditions at several of the fashionable summer resorts on the Atlantic Coast needed inspection, and they have packed up to spend the summer at the seashore at Government expense, "gathering information. The Navy attaches excellent opportunities for nice summer trips at Government expense, and those opportunities are not lost. This is a general condition that prevails among those who desire to secure copies should make application at once to insure getting the Yearbook.

One Whiff of Prussic Acid Instantly Destroys Life. The discoverer of prussic acid was instantly killed by inhaling one whiff of its own handiwork. Pure prussic acid is never sold or handled. It kills, not in three minutes or half an hour, but the instant it enters the lungs as a gas. The mixture ordinarily sold as prussic acid is 88 parts water to two parts of the drug. Even in this form it is very deadly. Atropine, though it has no harmful odor, is so deadly that as much of it as would adhere to the end of a moistened forefinger would instantly cause death. Cyanide of potassium has a pleasant smell, which is not injurious, but a small quantity swallowed kills at once. Pure ammonia, if inhaled, would cause death almost as quickly as prussic acid. Nitric acid will burn wood, eat through iron plates and destroy whatever it touches. A carboy was once broken in an acid factory. Everyone ran away, leaving the acid to amuse itself by setting fire to its surroundings. Soon, however, it was seen that the building would be destroyed and hundreds of people lose their employment, on which four men volunteered to put out the fire in the acid room. They succeeded and came out feeling apparently unharmed. Five hours later all were dead.

VERY MEAN OF HER.

"Is my hat on straight?" "Yes; but I don't think your hair is."

"Don't lose your womanliness and sweetness in your efforts to achieve success in business or professional life," was the counsel of a prominent clergyman of Brooklyn to a class of graduates from an industrial institution, recently, and, he added, "I have been telling you about it. I want you to remember that you must not lose the woman in the wage-earner. It is what you are, not what you do, that is of most value, and you need to retain your womanliness and gracefulness whatever business or profession you may pursue." And Then He Twiggled. She—I don't know what you mean by bringing me through a place like that. I am sure my dress is all torn. He—Well, but I wanted to carry you. She—Offered to carry me! He—What more could I do? She—Perhaps you could have carried me.—Weekly Telegraph.
