WORDS MADE TO ORDER.

John Quincy Adams Did Not Speak Attributed Last Message.
"Not long before his death, I called on Dick Thompson, for so he is best known, and I listened with unusual interest to his political reminiscences, dating from 1868, when he was in Congress, and running on down to his retirement as Secretary of the Navy Department," said Congressman Landis, of Indiana, to a New York Sun writer. "I had asked him about John Quincy Adams when the latter was a member of the Lower House. After he had answered, he said: "Landis, I haven't much longer to live, and I want to make a little confession to you. It is not important, perhaps, but I am the only one living who knows the secret, and I think I shall feel better to know that I have told it. I was in the House when John Quincy Adams had the attack which resulted in his death two days later. I was one of the four who carried him into the Speaker's room. He never regained consciousness. After his death we who had carried him out of the House met and questioned one another until each confessed that he had not heard Mr. Adams say anything after we picked him up. In those days the last words of great men had an interest which does not attach to last utterances in this age. And so it was agreed that inasmuch as Mr. Adams had no chance to say anything for himself, we would "I was selected to formulate something suitable. It was no easy task, but

I finally reported as his last words, "This is the last of earth." One of the four who had helped to carry him out replied, "I am content." These last words were not intended to be credited to Mr. Adams. The member, who said, "I am content," meant that he was satisfied with my report, but I did not so understand him at the time. I thought that the words were intended as a sort of amendment, and added them. As they seemed quite appropriate, we concluded to let them stand with his words.
"Mr. Thompson was not a destroyer. He was not the man to mar, jostle or change, but he assured me that he would do his best to put right on this last-words business, as he called it, and I tell you the story as he told it to me. I suppose Mr. Adams spoke some last words somewhere, but they were not the same which you and I have heard about in our time."

is incapable of supporting any large number of men.
To take the railway first, it is poorly built, and until it is relaid from end to end and the 40-pound rails with which it has been laid replaced by heavier ones it will never be a first-class line or capable of accommodating either heavy or fast traffic. Even then it will have steep gradients (1 to 60) and sharp curves, to say nothing of the break at Lake Balkal, to contend with.
Again, even were the railway thoroughly equipped as a first-class line, for the great part of its length at least it runs through no country from which supplies for a large army could be withdrawn, and with its base many thousands of miles away, and connected with its base by only a single line of rails, an army of more than 20,000 men would scarcely be able to keep the field for long.
"Consent of the Governed."
Chicago Inter Ocean.
Since Mr. Bryan delayed finishing his speech until after the North Carolina election he had opportunity to give at least a few of his 800 words to that interesting topic. Mr. Bryan's devotion to the "consent of the governed" in Luzon is so profound that he must have observed the occasion to apply the same principle in North Carolina.
If "imperialism" means denial of "consent of the governed," then "imperialism" exists in North Carolina. It is not established by the Republican Administration, but by the "military" methods of Democratic "Red Shirts." It is not put in force against rebellious Malays, but against law-abiding native Americans.
