Nearly all the papers of the Pacific Northwest have lately devoted considerable space to the well-known wood preservative, Avenarius Carbolineum. This is only natural, as the great value of this article has already manufested likely in this section wherever employed. Thinkin the section wherever employed. Think-ling men, experts in wood construction, believe that Avenarius Carbolineum is destined to be used as extensively as paint, and predict that it will not only prove an economic blessing to all who around the Home, one side of which is bright red and the other side blue, thus making the little fellow look conspicu-ous should be again run away. Metal will be discarded for wood in many erections where the former is now exclusively used, when the fact is conclusively proved that wood treated with Avenarius Carbolineum soquires a tensile strength equal to all demands put upon it, and rendered immune against decay, will outlast the best metal castings, subject as they are to rust and loss of vitality from vibration.

Pieces of beard, railroad ies and wharf posts subjected to the most trying clious should be again run away.

A Word About Weber Pianos

"There are hundreds of plane forte makers in the United States," says the New York Tribune, "but not over four are undisputably in the front rank, and are undisputably in the front rank, and prominent among the four is the house of Weber. Although its founder, like the originators of the other leading houses, is no longer living, the great factory which he established still goes on, and the Weber warerooms contain today more exquisite examples of the piano makers art than were ever before shown by this renowned concern. The elder Weber was a gentus in the realm of tone production, and it has been often said that the quality that Stradivarius bestowed upon the violin Weber imparted to his piano forte. His successors have strictly mainthe violin Weber imparted to his plans forte. His successors have strictly maintained the high standard of excellence established in the early days of the concern, and have perpetuated that wonderful tone quality for which the Weber plans has so long been distinguished. The artistic productions of the house this season merit especial comment."

We have a full assortment of these beautiful casings, in all the varieties of handsomely figured woods.
