a sealskin garment costs a good dear of money, but the comfort derived from one properly made and of good quality cannot be overestimated. We have re-ceived a large number of orders already for this ever popular and fashionable fur, and would urge intending purchasers to call soon as possible and be measured. This will avoid possible delay as the season advances. We have one of the finest stocks of all high-grade furs that has ever been shown in the Northwest, and the most fastidious can find something to please. Our line of neck boas is unsur-passed, and a number of high-class nov-elties are shown. G. P. Rummelin & ns, 126 Second street, near Washington,
