DISTINGUE GALLING GOWN.

This extremely smart and somewhat dressy little gown is representative of what the tailor-made gown of the season in. This is one of those new tailor gowns whi h comb as all the charms of other styles with the compactly stitched and neatly present style of the tailor-made. The color is of palest tan, with a pink suggestion in it. The yoke of the skirt and jacket are both of old-rose panne volvet, strapped over with a intitie of pale tan broadcloth. Embroideries of gold, forming the yokes of skirt and jacket, aid richness and clegance to the contume and bring put the spirit of the soft light tones of calor. The sleeve shows a puffing of the velvet at the elbow, which is a pleasing variation from the popular
