

NORTHSIDE STEEP CLIMB

CLOUD CAP INN MAZAMAS WENT UP A 40 PER CENT GRADE.

Reached Mount Hood's Summit Ahead of Time, but Too Late for the Meeting.

While the Mazamas that made the ascent of Mount Hood from Cloud Cap Inn on the north slope did not have the pleasure of meeting the south-side climbers, they had a jolly time of it. They reached the summit long before the hour set for the meeting...

The north-siders were from 5:30 A. M. until 1:10 P. M. making the climb, and taking a half-hour rest at Lunch Rock. They struck snow after passing the point on Cooper's spur...

A mistake in transmission made The Oregonian say yesterday that I. McGowan went only to Cloud Cap Inn. McGowan climbed to Mount Hood's summit, and was as agile as the best of them...

ADVANCE GUARD RETURNS. Two of the Mazamas Arrive Here on Their Wheels.

A. J. Capron and Professor M. M. Ringler, the advance guard of the returning Mazamas, reached the city last evening. They came on bicycles, having left Government Camp yesterday morning at 6 o'clock...

The ascent this year was by all odds the most successful that the society has ever made. Not a single hitch occurred; everything went off just as planned. It was not the largest party that ever reached the summit...

"We camped in the snowfields the night before, and the first party reached the summit at 12:30 P. M. A good walker, knowing the road and actually reaching the top was greater than ever before."

"The ascent this year was by all odds the most successful that the society has ever made. Not a single hitch occurred; everything went off just as planned. It was not the largest party that ever reached the summit...

"Professor Reid, of Johns Hopkins University, who was a member of the ascending party, stopped off at Crater Rock and made a scientific examination of the remarkable phenomenon. He has no doubt that it is the center crater of the mountain. Some portions of the rock are so hot you cannot bear your hand on them, and the escaping sulphur steam is very scalding."

"The view from the summit of Mount Hood is simply beyond description. To say that it is magnificent is too feeble. It is wonderful, marvelous, enchanting. We saw nine snow-capped mountain peaks from the summit. On the south lay Mount Jefferson, Mount Pitt and the Three Sisters, and on the north Helens, Adams and Rainier. In addition to these there was a snow-capped mountain on the south which was plainly discernible, but which nobody knew the name of."

"On a clear day you can easily see Portland from the summit by the aid of binoculars. At night you can see the electric lights of the city without any artificial aid. People say that three years ago this last Fourth of July The Oregonian tower, which was illuminated very brilliantly that night, was plainly discernible above all the other lights of the city."

"Although it has not been definitely agreed upon, it is probable that next year the Mazamas will join the San Francisco party in the ascent of Mount Shasta. To do so seems to be the desire of a majority of the members of the society present."

G. H. Roberts, a prominent mining man of Idaho, is in Portland, arranging to have a dredge built for his placer mine in Grant County. He has 200 acres on Crane Creek, a tributary of the John Day, where a thorough system of prospecting shows the value of the ground to average 90 cents a cubic yard.

A new series of six-room flats is to be erected on the northeast corner of Twelfth and Taylor streets at a cost of $22,000, by R. W. Wilson. The contract was to have been let yesterday, but the absence of the architect at the seaside caused a postponement of the opening of bids until tomorrow.

There are to be eight flats in the quarter block, which lies directly opposite the First Baptist Church and Methodist Episcopal Grace Church. Six of them are to face Twelfth street and two will front on Taylor. The series will consist of a two-story frame structure set on a full brick basement. All the modern appliances, as regards heating, lighting and plumbing, will be provided.

The presence of too much water has worked against operating the mines by the crude slice-box methods of the past, as the land is so level that the tailings cannot be run off. The dredge boat will have the advantage, as it will need the water to keep afloat, while the buckets are reaching down to bed rock and bringing the gravel and gold on board to be separated. We can run nine months in the year, as the frosts will not interfere with us to the same extent that they do with old-fashioned appliances. We hope to have the dredge in operation early in the fall."

UP TO THE TIMES ALL THE TIME

THE ONLY JERSEY INDIAN.

Dan Halstead Lives Alone in a Hovel in Salem County. Newark News. In a little one-room hovel without windows, situated on a lonely spot along the Maurice River, a short distance from Norma, N. J., lives the sole survivor of the South Jersey Indians. Dan Halstead. For more than half a century this old man, shunning the ways of civilization as much as possible, has clung to the habits of his forefathers.

Halstead, though not a full-blooded Indian, is said to be a grandson of old Shamung, a great chief whose tribe has its hunting grounds along the banks of the Maurice River. When the white man came, Halstead's father found many open spaces and clearings along the streams used by the Indians for raising corn. The settlers took possession of these lands and killed off the bear and deer, so that the Indians were compelled to take to their canoes and float down to the lower bay.

But old Shamung, or, as he was known in 1890, "Basket Jim," refused to abandon the hunting grounds of his people and settled down on a flat, once the Little Indian village, and began to make baskets for a living. Shamung died in 1892 on the Clarke place, near Rosenhaym, much respected by the descendants of the whites who had formerly dispossessed his people of their native soil.

The grandson of the old chief, Dan Halstead, has lived pretty much the same kind of life. He is a quiet, peaceful sort of a fellow, without kith or kin, and the only living friend he has in the world is his dog Prince, a mongrel. This dog is his sole companion. An old horse of which he was the owner recently died, and now the people around Norma are talking about setting up a collection to buy another one. He raises a few vegetables in a little truck garden at his home and spends the remainder of his time fishing.

Dan Halstead lives with only one ray

FIGURES ARE MISLEADING

AMERICAN EXPORTS OF MANUFACTURES REALLY GOING UP. Statement Showing Decrease Does Not Include Trade With Porto Rico and Hawaii.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—Exports of manufactures from the United States appear to be slightly less in the fiscal year just ended than in the preceding year, the figures for the 11 months ending with May showing an apparent reduction of $14,965,000. This statement, however, is misleading because the figures of the year 1901 do not include the exports to Porto Rico and Hawaii, which were included in former years. These exports are largely manufactures and will aggregate $25,000,000 for the fiscal year. Were it possible for the Bureau of Statistics to include in its figures of exports of manufactures those sent to Hawaii and Porto Rico, the figures of 1901 would differ little from those of 1900.

Indeed, an analysis of the general export figures of manufacturers for the 11 months now available shows in most cases an increase over 1900, and that the decrease is confined to a few articles and is due, in some cases, at least, to a fall in price rather than a reduction in quantity. In illuminating oils, for example, the export figures for the 11 months ending with May, 1901, show a decrease of $4,500,000 in value, but an increase of nearly 50,000,000 gallons, the accurate figure being: For 11 months ending with May, 1901, 563,554,528 gallons; value, $31,735,797; and for the 11 months of 1900, 711,842,276 gallons; value, $47,233,483. Two other great articles of our exports of manufactures show a reduction in 1901 as compared with 1900, viz., copper and cotton manufactures, and these, indeed, form the chief reduction in the grand totals for the Bureau of Statistics to include in its figures of exports of manufactures those sent to Hawaii and Porto Rico, the figures of 1901 would differ little from those of 1900.

The total exports of cotton manufactures in the 11 months ending with May, 1901, were $17,375,299, against $18,063,823 in the corresponding months of last year, a reduction of $4,800,284; while an examination of the figures of the exports of cotton cloth to China shows that in 1901, $28,284,946 in the 11 months of 1900 to $24,047,727 in the same months of 1901, a reduction of $4,237,219 in this item alone. Thus the reduction in the exports of cotton manufactures is entirely accounted for in this single item of cotton cloths to China, where the reduction is, of course, but temporary, due to the disturbances in that country during the first half of the fiscal year. The only remaining item in the list of exported manufactures which shows a material reduction in 1901 as compared with 1900, is iron and steel, which shows a fall of $3,721,840 pounds in quantity, and $1,849,518 in value during the 11 months, ending with May, 1901, as compared with the same period of 1900, though the value of copper exports in 1901 is more than $6,000,000 in excess of the corresponding months of 1899.

In a large share of the important articles of our exports during 11 months of 1901 are about $2,000,000 in excess of the same months of last year; in pig iron there is an increase of $1,000,000; in bars and rods of steel, an increase of $1,500,000; in electrical machinery, $1,500,000; in boots and shoes, over $1,000,000; in cotton seed oil, nearly $2,000,000; in carriages and cars, $2,000,000; in chemicals, about $1,000,000; in scientific instruments, $1,000,000, while, as already indicated, in some cases where the value has decreased there is still an increase in quantities, the apparent reduction being due to the fall in price and not to a reduction in the quantity exported.

American manufacturers have, therefore, no occasion for anxiety regarding the figures of our exports during the 11 months of 1901. In fact, the figures of our exports of manufactures for 1901 show a marked growth over those of the preceding year, and of any preceding year. In steel rails, for example, the exports during 11 months of 1901 are about $2,000,000 in excess of the same months of last year; in pig iron there is an increase of $1,000,000; in bars and rods of steel, an increase of $1,500,000; in electrical machinery, $1,500,000; in boots and shoes, over $1,000,000; in cotton seed oil, nearly $2,000,000; in carriages and cars, $2,000,000; in chemicals, about $1,000,000; in scientific instruments, $1,000,000, while, as already indicated, in some cases where the value has decreased there is still an increase in quantities, the apparent reduction being due to the fall in price and not to a reduction in the quantity exported.

POPULISM A QUESTION OF CROPS.

Springfield (Mass.) Republican. The Populist party of Kansas was formally disbanded only a few days ago. It grew out of crop failure and died of prosperity on the very edge of what threatens to be a more serious crop failure than it ever thrived on. We are to look out, then, for a revival of Populism. It takes only about one crop failure to send Kansas over from shouting that everything is all right to roaring that everything is all wrong, and that the whole Nation must be upset accordingly.
