

WANT NO REVISION

Republican Leaders Opposed to Tariff Changes.

THE ARGUMENT OF HOPKINS

He Believes That All the Money We Can Accumulate Will Be Necessary to Build the Canal and Improve Our Harbors.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Each member of the ways and means committee in turn finds some reason why nothing should be done in the way of tariff revision at the coming session of Congress.

Hopkins of Illinois, a member of the committee, seems to have brought out a real practical suggestion and says: "Tariff revision and further reduction of the internal revenue should not be undertaken at the coming session of Congress.

To those people who want river and harbor improvements and want a Nicaragua Canal constructed, this statement of Hopkins, will appear with some force, as the revenue is needed for public works of that character.

THE LEWIS AND CLARK CENTENNIAL.

A Call by the Chairman of the Subscription Committee.

The time has come when active measures should be taken for organization of effort for the Lewis and Clark Centennial.

It is requested, therefore, by the chairman of the committee appointed under the act of incorporation, that a committee of three be appointed by each of the following associations, namely: The Chamber of Commerce, the Board of Trade and the Manufacturers' Association, to meet with the committee appointed by the incorporators, to open subscriptions for celebration of this Centennial.

The respective committees are requested to meet at the First National Bank in Portland on Saturday, November 2, 1901, at 3 o'clock P. M., to take necessary steps for opening subscriptions for the above object.

Democracy and its hopes and fears.

This has been mainly due to the fact that the Democratic party has not been washing its dirty linen in public like the Republican organization.

The chief political prize to be given away is the United States Senatorship; that is proven by the fact that the present bitter contest in the Republican party is centered around that plum.

The most interesting figure in the Washington Democracy is Senator George Turner, of Spokane. Judge Turner's political record is well known; how he won a Republican reconstructionist in the South after the war, fighting the Bourbon Democracy with all the intensity of his strong nature.

Some Democrats object to the re-election of Turner on the ground that he has been long enough in the office to pay his little bill to Democratic support. It is all right they say for him to be elected as a fusionist or Populist with the aid of Democratic votes; but now that the party has disappeared, and merged into the Democracy, they claim for an old-time Democrat.

If there is anything in violent advocacy of Democratic principles, however, this objection surely should not count against the Senator. He has burned every bridge behind him, and made his return to the Democratic party, if possible, impossible. He voted against the ratification of the peace treaty with Spain, refusing to follow Rogers's suggestion to vote for it; he was one of the first to resign his office under the McKinley administration; he was one of the leaders in the fight against the ship subsidy bill at the last session of Congress; he is a free-silverist still, and gloried in it.

There was some justification, from a personal standpoint, in Turner's leaving the Republican party, although his advocacy of free silver will always cause his sincerity to be questioned. A man of commanding talents, but a poor politician in his personal interests, he was concerned, he was kept in the rear by men who were his inferiors in intellect but his superiors in the art of political manipulation. He brooded on this fact until he became ready to renounce the political convictions of a lifetime. And when he did he took no half-way measures. He turned his back squarely, and fought every principle advocated by his old party with the same vehemence and bitterness with which he formerly advocated them. And when he went out he took many big men with him. There is no denying the fact that his desertion from the Republican party the services of many men whose services were valuable.

In the coming Senatorial fight Turner will probably play a waiting game. His friends will try to get him to support Democratic Legislative nominations as possible, and keep him busy set up within their own party. But $100,000 spent in the election will not carry it for Turner. His only hope lies in the factional division of the Republican party. If the Republicans quarrel as bitterly over the nomination of candidates for the Legislature as they did over the nomination of a candidate for Governor, the Democrats stand a good chance of controlling the Legislature. Therein lies Turner's hope. What money and argument will not accomplish for him, Republican foolishness may accomplish.

The atrocious murder of ex-Chief of Police Meredith, and the fact that he was hounded to his death by one Republican faction seeking to gain political advantage over another Republican faction, has given the Democratic aspirants, James Hamilton Lewis, Seattle's resplendent, bewickered, perfumed darling, is also said to be a candidate. Colonel Lewis has not announced himself—probably will not. He likes to pose as the man upon whom the party can unite when all others fail, and in case of a Democratic row over the Senatorship he would probably come forward and offer himself as a sacrifice on the altar of Democratic harmony. He essayed this feat in the Governorship last year, but his offer was rejected in a manner that savored of ribaldry.

Lewis has not the following he once had. Six years under the limelight have showed dents in his armor and flaws in his political makeup. Still an idol, his worshippers consist of a number of people who have not been disillusioned. Once Lewis had King County solidly at his back; today he would do well to secure the hearty support of one-half of it. Still he would make trouble were he to enter the Senatorial fight. He has many strong friends, and were the Legislature to be Democratic, many Seattle business influences might support him on the ground that his presence in the Senate would be a good thing for Seattle.

Charles S. Voorhees, of Spokane, is also mentioned as a Senatorial possibility. Voorhees is a son of the old school, more of the Washburn, and was twice elected Delegate to Congress in territorial days. He is an effective campaigner, and has been out of politics for so long as not to be identified with any Democratic factions. An attempt was made by the opposition to Governor Rogers last year to make Voorhees their candidate, but it failed. Nevertheless, he was in the campaign, however, and gave Rogers most hearty support. Voorhees always denied that his name was mentioned for Governor with his authority. He is a weak Democrat, a Bourbon, and gave Rogers most hearty support.
