Northup. The porch and grounds were brightly lighted with Japanese lanterns, and Birgefield's orchestra from the central balcony furnished delightful music throughout the evening. Miss Nan Cooper assisted in receiving the guests. The decorations of Indian baskets and choice flowers were particularly artistic. The main hall was trimmed with palms and ferns and yellow roses, with yellow ribbons streaming from the electrolights and grills to the landing. The reception-rooms were decorated with tamarack, wild roses and pink carnations. The supper-room, which was presided over by Mrs. C. J. Crandall, Mrs. F. W. Bayley and Mrs. C. Cooper, was most attractive with scarlet carnations and soft red shades, while the small reception room in which lemonade was served by Miss Edna Glenn and Miss Prudence Patterson was in delicate shades of green. Miss George Sampson, Miss Harriet Marden, Miss Constance Morris, Miss Margaret Kinsley and Miss Harriet Cram assisted in entertaining the guests, who numbered about 250.
