

At the Beaches

The rush to the beaches steadily increases with no signs of cessation. Every train and boat is literally backed with vacation-seekers, and will be until about August 15. The middle of August has always been the high-water mark of seaside travel, after which, slowly increasing, comes the ebb. The present season is much further advanced than was last season at the same time, and is especially favored with beautiful weather. Last year at this time, and all through August, rain fell repeatedly. The weather this season at the seacoast is fully described as "perfect," while nothing happens in the interior to interrupt the hot weather that sends crowds to inhale the bracing sea air.

Hotel trade at the beaches this year, and during the last few years, is not what it was six or seven years ago. The arrivals consist principally of people from Boise, Walla Walla, Spokane and Seattle, while Portland people occupy cottages or "hang out" a few days at private boarding-houses. This is especially so at Long Beach, where "transient trade" are the words ever in the mouth of the hotel-keeper.

Fog every morning lies low over the land along Long Beach. This fog is strictly a late summer and fall feature, and if nothing else betokens the advancement of the season, the fog does. To see a fog come in from the ocean one must be an early riser. At 5 o'clock the sun has risen in a clear sky. Soon far out to sea a low bank of clouds close to the water is seen approaching, blown swiftly on by the steady wind. Little by little the sun is obscured; then everything is enveloped in the cold gray vapor that strikes one's face like rain. Sometimes the fog hangs over the land until noon, but usually by 3 it is blown away or disappears before the sun as quickly as it came.

GOOD TIMES AT FLAVEL.

Abundant Entertainment Provided for All Guests.

The continued hot weather has made the hotel proprietors of the coast resorts jubilant, and at no time is there greater cause for this kind of joy than at Flavel. At this beautiful and most commodious hotel the prices were put down especially low this year, and the consequence was that the hotel filled up at the very beginning of the season. The hotel is a large crowd of delighted pleasure-makers at Flavel now, and prospects that the fun will continue throughout the summer. The various provisions for sport, sea-bathing, tennis, bowling, horseback riding, fishing, etc., have been liberally indulged in, and everybody seems to be enjoying himself, or herself, to the limit. They do not envy their relatives elsewhere in town, and express the inclination to stay among the salt breezes until the hotel closes for the autumn. Dancing is indulged in every evening, and a special hold every Saturday evening, when a string orchestra is provided. Especially fortunate are the guests at Flavel in the matter of culinary arrangements, for it is admitted by everybody that Mrs. Mitchell sets the best table at the coast this year. Aside from this, of course, it is known that the dining-room in the hotel Flavel is the most commodious and completely equipped dining-room at the coast. Following is a list of guests now at Flavel:

Neely, Mr. Kronberg, Mrs. George Vedder, and Mrs. Charles Perneau. A concert by Everett's orchestra was given in the open air at an interested crowd, last Sunday afternoon, at Long Beach proper. The expense of engaging Everett's orchestra was defrayed by a liberal public contribution. There is contemplated a similar concert for this Sunday, if the necessary money can be raised.

AT SEA VIEW.

As usual there were several social functions at the Hackney cottage during the past week. Thursday week a pleasurable evening was spent in an informal musical. The house was turned over, the guests entertaining themselves most enjoyably. The programme was as follows: Piano selection, Miss Hagner; Silene Hachney, in his vocal stand-by; violin solo, Gus Pfunder; selection by the trio, Hachney, Silene Stone; piano solo, Miss Botefuhr; piano selection, Miss Hagner; piano preference, Miss Marsh; violin solo, D. V. Euren; J. Fox, kind vocal company. On Friday night followed a dance that was greatly enjoyed. A roaring bonfire was the entertainment enjoyed by the guests at Mrs. Hackney's last Tuesday, in the usual contribution. There is comparison with it this year. A jolly round of fun describes the pleasure about the fire, while its fame has made a date in the annals of social activity on Sea View.

ON THE NORTH SIDE.

One Great Amusement is Found at the Bowling Alleys.

At Sea View and Long Beach new faces have appeared, and familiar ones gone. The bowling alleys are centers of attraction. Here are discussed the topics of the day. This is especially so of Stout's bowling alley, at Sea View, run by Johnnie Fisher. The four alleys are kept running early and late. Everybody bowls at the beach, old men and children. Many bring down horses and rigs to Long Beach. Few private individuals have horses and buggy at Seaside, and the Oregon beaches are because of the difficulty of transporting them. Through transportation on the Potter permits people to land horses at the Ilwaco dock without trouble, while those on the Oregon beach wishing rigs have to drive from Astoria or Skippanon to Seaside, a distance of 15 miles, after bringing them by boat from Portland to Astoria.
