CAMBRIDGE, Nov. 8.—As was expected, Harvard defeated the University of Pennsylvania on Soldiers' Field today without difficulty, but the score of 11 to 0 was about one-half what it should have been, as far as the crimson was concerned. Four times Harvard was inside of Pennsylvania's 12-yard line, but two fumbles, holding in the line, and a grand brace by the Quakers on their own three-yard line, kept the crimson from scoring many additional points.

Three times in the first half Harvard broke the 12-yard line. The first time she reached the 12-yard line, where the ball went to Pennsylvania for holding. Next she got within three yards of the goal line, right under the posts, where Putnam fumbled. On the third time Harvard scored, starting from Pennsylvania's 10-yard line, and gradually pushing the ball along until Graydon was dragged across. Barnard made a miserable failure in kicking the goal, but Graydon missed making a safety just after the score, as Putnam muddled the ball at the kick-off, and after carrying it behind the line just managed to get back into the field.

The second half was in a great measure a repetition of the first. At the start Harvard plunged and pushed until the ball was on Pennsylvania's 12-yard line, where there was usual fumbling. Stillman being the offender. After a punting match Harvard started again for a score, and once more got inside of Pennsylvania's five-yard line, but a grand brace by the Quakers gave the ball on downs. The second score followed soon after this, and was the one spectacular feature of the game.

After the first half several men of the regular Harvard team replaced substitutes. Daily kicked two goals from the field. The second half was in a great measure a repetition of the first. At the start Harvard plunged and pushed until the ball was on Pennsylvania's 12-yard line, where there was usual fumbling.
