KAISER MEETS KING

Emperor of Germany Is Now in England.

RULERS' GREETING IS INFORMAL

Reception to Visitor Is Without Ostentation, by His Request-His Arrival the Occasion of an Imposing Naval Display.

LONDON, Nov. &-The German imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with Emperor William on board, accompanied by the escorting German cruisers and a flotilla of British torpedo-bonts, reached Port Victoria at 8 o'clock this morning.

The arrival of the German Emperor was made the occasion of an imposing naval display. All the warships at Sheerness were dressed, their crews manned the decks, and the usual salutes welcomed the imperial visitor. The Emperor were the undress uniform of a British Admiral. The German Ambassador, Count Wolff-Metternich, soon joined His Majesty, who subsequently received the British court officials sent to attend him and the other embers of the German Embassy.

After breakfast Emperor William landed, the crew of the Hohenzollern manning the ship and cheering lustily and the British warships firing another salute as the Emperor boarded a train for Dover provided by the railroad officials. All traffic was stopped for half an hour along the route before the imperial special train was due. Large British and German detective staffs were on duty, and the junctions and approaches to the stations were closely watched and cleared of spectators during the passage of the train.

It was raining heavily when Emperor William left the train at Dover, whence, mounted on one of his own chargers, he rode to Shorncliff Camp, accompanied by Lord Roberts and a brilliant staff.

The meeting of the King and Emperor William at Wolferdon was as informal as could well be imagined. The public, as it had been elsewhere, had been rigidly excluded from the station. A few minutes before the arrival of Emperor William's special train, King Edward, accompanied by a single equerry, drove up to the station with a pair and brougham. His Majesty wore a top hat and a frock coat. He stepped upon the platform as the Emperor's train stopped and bared his head as his royal visitor alighted. Their Majshook hands and embraced and

In reply, the Emperor

'Gentlemen-Let me again assure you how great a pleasure this day has given me. I am extremely honored and very happy to hear that the sum I devoted to the wives and children of the dragoons who departed for the war has done so much good. I think the best way of marking this day in the history of the regiment is by adding another sum there-to, in the hope that it may do an equal amount of good." The Emperor concluded by calling for cheers for the regiment and King Edward, and led the salvo of hur-rahs. Emperor William and the officers then repaired to the messroom of the regiment, where His Majesty had lunch. Among the house party at Sandringham are the Prince of Wales, Premier Balfour, Colonial Secretary Chamberlain and Mrs. Chamberlain, War Secretary Brodrick, two children were injured. Ambassador Lascelles and Sir Frederick Treves, Sergeant-Surgeon to King Edward.

The Emperor reviewed a detachment of troops at Shorneliff, in company with th King. With this exception, the reception Emperor having especially requested that guards of honor and similar attentions be dispensed with. After the review, the Emperor presented decorations to Basing, the officer in command, and to other officers of the regiment,

MEN WHO PROTECTED THE EMIGRANTS FROM THE INDIANS.

During the War of the Rebellion the National Government adopted a precautionary measure of rending a company of soldiers westward across the continent with the pioneer emigrations, to see that the Indians would not molest the emigrants. The above picture shows the officers of the escort in the year 1861, and old residents of the state will doubtless remember some of the faces depicted. Beginning at the left, the names are, top fow: Le Roy Crawford, T. Barker, P. R. Forney. Bottom row: Medorem Crawford, Captain H. E. Maynadier, Dr. L. S. Thompson and C. Masmichael.

Captain Le Roy Crawford, now a resident of Chase's Lake, New York, and a brother of the inte Medorem Crawford, is now at Oregon City on a short visit with relatives. Speaking of the old escort days, Captain Crawford said:

"At the beginning of the great War of the Rebellion the Government began to send escorts with the emigrants. We made four trips across the continent, the last one being in 1864. We would come west with the emigrants in the Spring and Summer, and return to the East during the Winter by way of Parama. There were about 50 men in the company, not counting cooks, blacksmiths and other followers, who swelled the whole to about 80.

"After the war troops were stationed all along the route, who acted as garrisons, guarding the emigrants the same way that we did, only they did not have to move with the wagon trains, but remained at a Government post."

NEW RULE WORKS WELL

Chief of Artillery Reports Organization of Seaconst Districts.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 .- In his first annual report, General Wallace F. Ran-dolph, Chief of Artillery, says the new scheme of organization of the seacoasts in artillery districts, as a rule, has worked well, and it is believed that much more progress in a illery efficiency has been made under this system than would have been possible under the old regimental plan. The development of the present system of fire control has not been satis factory, owing to unforcemen conditions, but it is hoped that before the close of this year a new system of position-find-ing will be jut into practice. General Randolph complains of the insufficient allowance of ammunition for target prac-tice. Attention is invited to the necessity of increasing the pay and number of electrician Serbeants, in view of the impossi-bility of caring for the numerous electrical devices at Army posts without skilled men. At least 125 such Sergeants are recommended, with the pay and allow. ances of first-class Sergeants of the Sig-nal Corps. As another outcome of the maneuvers, General Randolph recommends five gunner specialists for each company of coast artillery, who shall be allowed $5 extra pay per month. Other-

Disorderly scenes continue throughout the promining thusiness man who is under detention at the Middleex County Jall in Cambridge on the charge of having murdered Missionara A. Morton. While the statement of the boy clears was nothing in the boy's statement issued tonight which either disproved or confirmed the theory that Mason was the one Disorderly scenes continue throughout the mining regions. At Lievin, houses and stores were sacked by strikers and the theory that mason was the one who gave him the watches to pawn. The police were very reticent as to what furnand stores were sacked by strikers and there were rumors tonight that he had said that the man was a white man. The detention of Perry came through the Boston Children's Ald Society and imme diately through its officials, Charles Bertwell and Samuel Lawrence. These men were led to believe that the handwriting the work of the society was elmilar to that contained on the records filled out by the man with the stolen watches. The state police were called in. The young man, who proved to be Perry, was found and later he admitted taking one of the watches from a man in Cambridge over month ago, just after the murder of Miss McPhee, and the second last Sunday, the day-following that on which Mise Morton was murdered in Waverly. At first the young man denied he had ever sold a watch, but later made a statement, which was taken down by a stenographer. The boy was then turned over to Chief Wade, of the state police, and late tonight officers removed him to Cambridge. The boy in his statement says that he met the man, whose name is not disclosed, in Central Square, Cambridge, about four weeks ago After some conversation they began to talk about watches, and the man gave the boy a small watch. Perry pawned it with Nemser, and, meeting the man again gave him 75 cents of the proceeds. Last Sunday Perry met him again, as he says, accidentally, and again the man showed a watch. Perry says the man seemed anxious to get rid of it, so he took it and pawned it with Nemser, getting $4. He says he has not seen the man since. The boy is evidently a most valuable witness and the police are using every endeavor shield him from outside parties.

The detention of Perry was the main feature of the day, although during the forenoon a Somerville car conductor stated that Mason was on his car last Saturday night about 10 o'clock, or shortly after the time Miss Morton was murdered Mason will have a hearing in the Cam-

The Great Northern Company has added $500, so that there is now a prize of $1000 for the man or men who are successful in their search It is now almost a week since Mr. Eagan and his friends went into the mountains near Kallspell to spend a few days in hunting. The hunters took a sep-arate course, expecting to come together at camp in the evening. Mr. Eagan failed to join the others, and, after waiting a time, search was made for him. He was not found, and news of his disappearance was then spread among his friends at Kalispell and at home. Search then was commenced in earnest. As many men as could be spared from the road were sent into the mountains to explore every canon and gorge where it was thought the missing hunter may have strayed. An engine was sent to patrol the railroad tracks among the mountains, where the hunting party had camped, and the en-gineer was instructed to blow the whistle at frequent intervals, so that the lost man uld get his bearings, if he were still ve. It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and boweis; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the polson of catarrh.

All druggiets sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best char-coal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Abrorbent Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey. The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is, that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit. A Buffalo physician in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Absorbent Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."
