POSTOFFICE PLANS MAY INTERFERE WITH MONUMENT.

Committee in Charge of Project Seeks the Consent of the Secretary of the Interior.

The plan of the Government to erect a three-story extension to the Sixth-street side of the Postoffice seriously interferes with the project to place a monument to the Oregon Volunteers on that block.

"Even if an extensive wing is built on that side, there will be room for the monument," said General Owen Summers yesterday.

"If the plan is to make the main entrance on Sixth street, it would be very easy to make a concave front, allowing plenty of space for the monument, which will set partly in the street, according to the plan.

"The site on the Postoffice grounds at the corner of Fifth and Morrison has also been suggested, but this would not so well meet the plan as the site on the block between Sixth and Burnside streets.

"Why, I never had any idea at all that permission would be granted for a monument on these grounds," declared Postmaster A. B. Crossman.

It would seem that Portland has many naturally good sites for a monument, those in charge of the movement have spent many days in looking over suggested locations without deciding in favor of any but the two on Sixth street.

PRIZES FOR CHILDREN.

Little Ones Rewarded for Interest in Civic Improvement.

The children who received plants from the Civic Improvement Association last Spring with the understanding that the one whose flower gave evidence of the best care and was in the best condition would be suitably rewarded at the close of the season at last received their prizes yesterday.

The success of the undertaking is largely due to the indefatigable efforts of George Otten and President McCusker, who spent much time and labor in the work.

Volunteer Tramp Sang Requiem Mass Philadelphia North American. At the anniversary mass, which was sung Wednesday in memory of the Rev. Thomas McGlynn, rector of the Immaculate Heart Roman Catholic Church, the members of the choir were amazed when singing Ohnewald's Mass of Requiem by the sudden appearance of a stranger, garbed as a tramp, who approached James F. Desmond.

saying that he would like to assist in the singing.

"I've the voice, and know the music," he declared, and the choir was organized.

"When I am passing a church at the time of the Mass, I can't resist the temptation to stop in and join the choir."

NO TURKEY FOR THEM.

Vegetarians Celebrate Thanksgiving Without the Royal Bird.

Thanksgiving without a turkey would seem to some like no Thanksgiving at all, but the members of a small dinner party who were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Stone, at a Thanksgiving dinner are prepared to say that the event can be satisfactorily celebrated without the shedding of blood in the preparations for the spread.

POULTRY AND CAT SHOW

Entries Come in From All Parts of the Pacific Coast.

Entries of poultry and cats are being made from all parts of the Pacific Coast for show at the eighth annual exhibition of the State Poultry Association, to be held in this city from December 10 to 15.

The competition will be keen, as rumors are circulating that parties are paying from $25 up for a single bird with which to carry off some of the fine special premiums which have been the property of the association for several years.

The Aeonian Recitals. It is not often a musical programme is made up of such "gems" as Brahms' "Hungarian Dance, No. 6," Beethoven's "Lorelei," Wagner's "Tannhauser, Overture," and given to the people "scot free."

It has been one object in these recitals to give a programme that was both pleasing and instructive, and Mr. Wells has religiously adhered to the policy of presenting no programme excepting for its musical worth, with the result that persons are coming to appreciate nothing but the best, and will be satisfied with nothing short of it.
