

card party at the home of the former Thursday afternoon. The game was hearts and prizes were awarded to Mrs. White and Miss Hurley. The parlors were prettily decorated with white carnations, freesia, and a profusion of Oregon grapes. In the library the mantle was banked with Oregon grape, over which was an artistic arrangement of the wild blackberry vine with its exquisitely colored red leaves. Mrs. Sigler wore a beautiful white costume with trimming of lace and pearl applique. Mrs. Marshall was becomingly gowned in black silk and lace. The invited guests were: Mrs. A. T. Smith, Mrs. J. Frank Bonhoefer, Mrs. Herbert Cardwell, Mrs. A. C. Stalger, Miss Constance Walker, Mrs. Charles Howard Gaylord, Mrs. John Krause, Mrs. Martin Kapp, Mrs. E. N. Oberholzer, Miss Lucy Smith, Mrs. A. D. Walker, Miss K. Alice Quigg, Mrs. R. E. Watson, Mrs. Clarence Gilbert, Mrs. T. T. Davis, Mrs. White, Mrs. J. Frank Bonhoefer, Mrs. W. A. Hathaway, Mrs. C. W. Cather, Mrs. Sill, Miss Mabel Hurley, Mrs. W. B. George, Mrs. M. M. Adair.

Friday evening the ladies of the Unitarian Alliance gave in the chapel the first of a series of socials. Although the weather was disagreeable, the attendance was quite large. The musical programme, in charge of Mrs. Fallentin, was a delightful one and as follows: "Let Me Like a Soldier Fall".....Wallace "Drink to Me With This Wine".....Mozart "Oberon Mazurka".....H. Wieniawski "Berceuse".....Fr. Schubert "The Song of the Hammer".....Bonheur "Sleep on My Head".....De Koven "Doris" (with violin obbligato).....Bras "Angel's Serenade".....Neva Mrs. Albert Sheldon. Margaret Fallentin, violinist. "Progressive conversation" proved quite a novel feature and at the opening hour cards with pencils attached were handed each guest, and upon these cards were printed ten subjects, as follows: 1. Who will be Oregon's new Senator? 2. Are men more vain than women? 3. Should girls who are supported at home take office positions? 4. If not yourself, whom would you rather be? 5. Woman's place in politics? 6. Which is the more powerful, beauty or wealth? 7. Does high school training benefit the business man? 8. Who is your favorite author? 9. How will the Lewis and Clark Fair benefit the state? 10. Repeat your favorite quotation. Soon the guests were busy selecting those with whom they wished to converse upon the various subjects, placing the name of each at the respective topic. At the close of the music, the toastmaster, or subject-announcer, at the top of his bell, signalled the time for a three-minute discussion upon the first subject. Immediately an animated discussion began, till one could easily imagine the "third house" of our State Legislature in session. Three minutes up, and the sound of the bell signalled the time for the next announcement of the second printed question, and so on all down the list upon the card. Promptly following the conversation contest, coffee, cakes and sandwiches were served. The toastmaster, at the pleasure of the guests, played a number of piano selections there were charming solos by Mrs. Beverly and the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. McCormick entertained a number of their friends at a Saturday evening at their home, 27 Market street. The time was pleasantly spent in progressive whist. The first prize was awarded to Mr. L. B. Cusick and the consolation prize to Mr. C. Pondexter. Refreshments were served during the evening. The guests were: Mr. and Mrs. R. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. They were remarried at the Church of the Sacred Heart immediately following the celebration of high mass, Father Berchold officiating.
