Elevators Don't Run, and Tenants Keep Warm by Climbing Stairs.

CHICAGO, Feb. 7 .- With the addition of one more building, a 12-story office struc ture, on Lasalle street, to the list af by the elevator men's strike and the failure of attempts to induce building managers to sign agreements recognizing the unions of elevator conductors, the janitors and window-washers, there is no relief in sight. The settlement of the strike now rests with the coal teamsters. A committee of three has charge of the affair, with whom the strikers declare the business managers must treat. No coal has reached any of the buildings since the inauguration of the strike, and supplies with most of them are said to nearly exhausted.

Up to tonight, although the managers had held another conference, there had been no offer of settlement made to the strikers, who have turned their affairs over to a committee of teamsters. The teamsters are now in absolute con-trol of the situation. All coal supplies are completely shut off from the buildings and, if an attempt is made to secure pow-er from the Chicago Edison Company, the tugmen and freight-handlers will appar-ently be involved in the struggle and the coal supply of the power company

Voters under the bill must have resided in Alaska continuously for at least 90 days prior to election, and be 21 years old and able to read, write and speak the English language or some other European tongue, as well as being citi-zens of the United States. Some question was raised as to the provision that they should be able to read and write other than the English language. Mr. Cushman explained that this pro-ion was inserted because of the la large number of desirable settlers in Alaska now citizens of the United States, who had emigrated from Norway, Sweden and other countries of Northern En Many of them could not read or Europe the English language, yet were intelli-gent and thrifty, and in every way desirable citizens.

Voting Precincts.

The election machinery, he explained, was necessarily different from that in vogue in the states. He thought ad-visable to make the outlying precincts center in the mining districts, as these were universally the center of groups of prospective voters. Some ob-jection was made by members that this uld be a discrimination in favor of the nining classes, and would hardship the agriculturists, but more especially those loyed in the fisheries and canneries laska. To this charge, Mr. Cushman of Alaska. replied that all such settlements were tributary to mining districts, and that the mining district was the only proper unit. He said the last Tuesday in September was the latest possible date for holding the election, which would warwas yet sufficiently early to insure full returns being made to the Governor at

At the conclusion of his speech, Mr. Cushman answered a number of questions from various members. Gaines of Tennessee of course had to get in a word, and after touching upon the requirement that voters be able to read either the English language or that of some other European country, launched forth onto the constitutionality of such a provision. It was then 5 o'clock, and in perfect "good humor Cushman broke in to say: "I hope my friend from Tennessee at this late hour won't get started on the Constitution." The House laughed, and Gaines subsided.

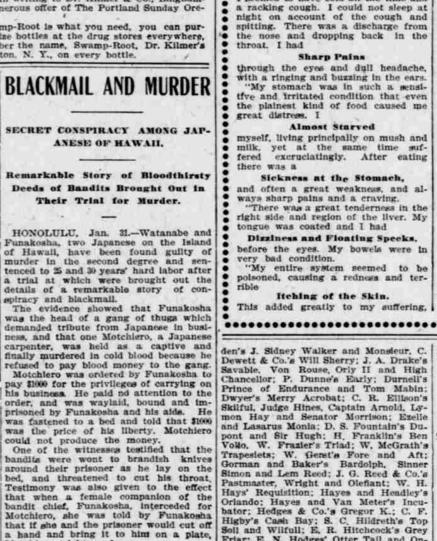

Representative Lacey followed Cushman In a strong endorsement of the bill, and he in turn was followed by Wooten of Texas, also in its behalf. Sulzer of New
