HUGHES TO GET OUT

Port of Portland Commissioner Wants to Resign.

BUT THERE'S A STRING TO IT

Insists That Successor Be From New Board—No Dictation From Ellis G.—Says Banfield—Captain Pease on Drydock Site.

Ellis G. Hughes, formerly an active member of the Port of Portland Commission, and for the past 15 months a conspicuous absentee, wants to resign from the commission. He stated recently to the present site of the Brooklyn navy-yard. Four thousand of Washington's soldiers, captured at the battle of Long Island, were confined in those hulks, and subsequent captives were added to their number until a considerable fleet was employed for the purpose. Release was usually offered to all who would forswear the cause for which they fought, but only one man (a Hessian) accepted liberty on that condition, while more than 15,000 died in their floating prisons.

PLANS FOR KNAPP'S TRIAL

Depend on Finding Body of Murdered Wife Hannah.

HAMILTON, O., Feb. 28.—It is currently reported about the jail today that Knapp is considering another confession that will cover other crimes. Meantime, while the officers are seeking all the information possible from him, it has been decided that his first trial will be here for the murder of his third wife, Hannah Goddard, unless the trial judge holds that a corpus delicti has not been established by the confession of Knapp, and other evidence that the officers have in their possession. Prosecutor Gard and other attorneys now hold that it is absolutely

NAMED BY CONGRESSMAN MOODY FOR REGISTER OF THE DALLES LAND OFFICE

M. T. NOLAN.

Colonel John McCracken that he would resign his position if the board would elect as his successor one of the new members who will go into office about two months hence. Colonel McCracken brought the matter up at a meeting of the board yesterday, and it caused somewhat of a flurry.

"If Mr. Hughes wants to resign," said President M. C. Banfield, "we will accept his resignation, but I want it understood that we will consider no proposition from him with a string to it. He has taken no part in the recent deliberations of the board, and has no right to dictate to us. If we were to fill a vacancy now, it would certainly be with one of the men recently chosen as commissioner, but we would not consider Mr. Hughes' wishes in the matter. As for the incoming members of the board, I am glad to extend an invitation to them to be present at any or all of the remaining meetings of the old board. We would be glad to have any assistance they could render us in our work from now on. Mr. Hughes is welcome to resign, but he can impose no conditions on us."

"As far as Mr. Hughes is concerned," said Commissioner Adams, "we have done without his services for 15 months, and I guess we can do without them for two months more."

Commissioner Swigert expressed his indifference to the whole matter, and there the subject ended.

Captain Archie Pease, the river pilot, who is to be one of the members of the new board, was invited to be present and state his opinion, from a pilot's standpoint, of the Mock's Bottom site for the drydock. This site has been the choice of the individual members of the board, but no official action has been taken on the matter yet. Captain Pease continued his remarks to the relation between the dock site and the channel, or more properly speaking, the river current. He said the current, flowing down past the Bottom, does not sweep in a curve around the university bluff, but strikes it at an angle just north of the proposed dock opening, and then rebounds. This would make it difficult to take ships into the dock with a strong current running. His observations were made while piloting slips up and down stream, but were not noted with special reference to the dock site. This opinion of Captain Pease, while it may not cause the selection of another site, was enough to convince the board of the necessity of looking further into the matter before definite action is taken. In all other respects, the Mock's Bottom site is superior to any yet brought to the notice of the Port of Portland, and unless some other site can be found possessing all its advantages without the one disadvantage, the Mock's Bottom location will doubtless be the choice of the board.

Commissioners McCracken, Swigert and Adams were appointed a committee to draw up a letter commending the work of Superintendent J. B. C. Lockwood in designing and supervising the building of the 20-inch dredge Columbia, and then the board adjourned.

Monument for Prison Ship Martyrs.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The movement to build a monument to the martyrs of the prison ships in the Revolution seems likely to be successful. It is to cost $200,000 and all but $11,000 is subscribed. Congress, the State of New York and the City of New York have appropriated amounts aggregating $125,000. The prisoners for whom the monument is to be built are those who were confined in the prison hulks anchored in the East River near necessary to find the body of Mrs. Hannah Goddard Knapp in order to try the prisoner here, and accordingly search for the body was continued today.

In any event, Knapp will have at least a temporary hearing before he is turned over to the authorities at Cincinnati or Indianapolis. The affidavit and other documents, as well as the confession, are in readiness for a hearing, and if the body is not found soon the prosecution will proceed without it. Meantime Knapp is being questioned more closely by officers on his general record, although he is no longer keeping open house with reporters, police and others to whom he has been talking so freely, and it is believed that he is on the verge of telling of other crimes.

Among those who have been with him today were medical experts, who pronounced him sane, but abnormally degenerate. Knapp himself is perfectly indifferent whether he is tried in Hamilton, Cincinnati or Indianapolis. He seems to have no dread of a trial, but is very apprehensive of lynching or some form of violence, and those who watch him say that he is really cowardly; the least noise that is not an ordinary jail noise startles him. He has been assured time and again that he is not to be lynched, that there is no danger whatever, and that he will be protected until the law can take its course. Through the taking of life with him was a mere pastime, he himself is afraid to die. He wants to live, even though he is behind bars. In the hope of saving his life, his family say he is insane, and insanity will be his plea for his life.

The prisoner is a talker in his sleep, but his words are not plain. He mutters all the time, and the opinion is that he is going over and over the scenes of his awful crimes. In order to give him mental rest, no one will be permitted to see him for several days.

After a session today in the sweatbox it was thought that Knapp burned several barns in this county last summer so as to rob the houses while the barns were burning. It was also the opinion of some experts present that Knapp was influenced in his murderous assaults by emotional insanity. It has been denied that he made at least two unprovoked attempts to kill women here whom he met on the street and did not know.

Knapp was given a bath, clean clothing and a shave today, and he looked much better. Later he was seized with stomach pains, and Dr. Brown was called. The doctor found the prisoner very sick and ordered him to be kept quiet.

Tappe, Would Shut Out Americans.

TORONTO, Ontario, Feb. 28.—Sir Charles Tupper, ex-leader of the Conservative party in the Dominion Parliament, in speaking of the Alaskan boundary dispute, said that he was still in favor of a proposition he had laid before Parliament as the best solution of the difficulty. It was that Parliament should pass a measure empowering the Dominion government to construct a line of railway from Kilomet or some other Northern British Columbia seaport to Dawson City, and that the Canadian Parliament should pass a law dealing with Americans mining in the Yukon territory similar to the law in the United States which forbids Canadians from mining in that country. He contended that such a law need not immediately be put into operation, but that it should be left in the hands of the Governor-General, which would mean that the Ministry could advise what should be done with it.
