

DRAMATIC STARS EARN LARGE SALARIES

BUT EVEN THEN IT IS AN UNCERTAIN PROFESSION—WITNESS JENNIE YEAMANS' BANKRUPTCY AND THE JANAUŠEK SALE

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(Special correspondence.)—The return of Ada Rehan to the stage, the bankruptcy of Jennie Yeamans, the sale of Madame Janauschek's belongings...

At the sale of Janauschek's effects last week it was remarkable to note the low prices which some of the curios brought. It may well be imagined that Janauschek possessed gifts from the royalties of all countries...

Ada Rehan returns to the stage in her old success, "The Taming of the Shrew." Odis Skinner is in the company, and they are playing on tour, having opened in Atlantic City...

The opening of the Hudson Theater by Ethel Barrymore is an event last week. Mrs. Barrymore is admirably fitted for a dainty part in a dainty play, called "Cousin Kate," written by Hubert Henry Davies...

It may be said that the beginning of his career dated from a monologue which he wrote for Madame Pilar Morin, who was at that time the most clever of comedienne...

It was for Nat Goodwin to see that Shakespeare's great play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," presented a good financial prospect...

Probably the most important thing in dramatic circles in New York is the appearance of Sir Henry Irving at the Broadway. Further details of this must be held over until the next issue...

Perhaps one of the most distinguished men visiting in America at the present time is Jean Riphechin, who came to superintend the production of his play, "Mam's Napolean," which went on for the first time at Philadelphia with Anna Held...

At the New Amsterdam Theater Nat Goodwin opened in this play, which is admirably staged and well presented with a strong leaning toward the higher element...
