SCARE IS OVER

Republicans Now Figure Mead Into Office.

PARTY STRONG IN STATE

Democrats Will Have Too Big a Majority to Overcome.

TURNER IS STRONGEST CARD

Roosevelt Sentiment in the State Will Bring Many Into Line Who Are Annoyed at Outcome of Railroad Commission Issue.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 4.—(Special.)—Those Democrats who figure it easy to defeat Mead hold the Republican majority in this state too lightly.

The figures of the last campaign show, if they can be accepted as indicating the normal relative strength of the two parties, that one-third of the Eastern Washington Republican vote and one-sixth of the Republican vote in Western Washington can be thrown to the Democrats without defeating the Republican ticket.

These figures certainly give the Democrats none the worse of a comparison of strength, for in a Presidential year the Republican vote will be increased rather than diminished. They show clearly, too, that good campaign management should protect the Republican state ticket against even the landslide that Democratic politicians claim.

Great Majority to Be Overcome.

Accepting the figures of two years ago, the Democrats must change 13,432 votes to win in this state this Fall. That change would only give them a bare majority of one vote, a margin that would be effective enough, but too uncomfortable and unsatisfactory.

The stupendous task the Democracy will undertake and the wilderness of the claim that a Democratic gubernatorial candidate can be easily elected is appreciated after a study of the last election figures. They show the contention is either made without considering political strength or that sublime confidence prevails.

Both parties this year accepted the vote for Supreme Court Judges as the party strength by apportioning convention strength on that basis. There are many good arguments for accepting this vote, the principal one being that the voter is less influenced by local prejudice and votes his ticket straighter for judicial than other positions. Taking the vote of the candidates for Judge of the Supreme Court as a basis, this division of strength is shown:

Weakness of Anti Movement.

These figures serve a purpose other than that of illustrating the Republican strength in the state. They show the weakness of the anti-Republican movement by indicating the comparatively small vote upon which the Democrats can draw in the anti-railroad stronghold. The strongest outcry against the Republican ticket has been in such counties as Whitman, which is always close and doubtful; Spokane, Lincoln, Adams, Asotin, Garfield and Stevens.

All of these are doubtful counties at times, and in all of them the aggregate Republican vote, which is the one from which the Democrats would have to muster strength, is not the factor that the Republican vote of an average West Side county is.

Even should the anti-Republican movement or pro-Turner effort succeed in taking away one-third of the Eastern Washington vote, the Republicans would lose on the basis of the vote two years ago, 697 votes. Grant that the proportion of loss in Western Washington would be half as great—a fair way of estimating it—the loss of one-sixth of the Republican votes would mean 629 votes gone to the Democrats. The change of this entire number to a Democratic candidate would still give the Republicans a slight majority—135.

Figured at Eastern Counties.

In figuring "Eastern" Washington counties, such districts as Yakima and Klickitat, which are almost West Side counties, such counties as Walla Walla, Franklin, Chelan, Okanogan and Ferry, where the anti-railroad feeling does not become a bitter prejudice, are all included, and not even Democratic leaders profess to believe that one-third of the Republican vote could be won away in these counties. In fact to draw off one-third of the vote in any county would be a feat hardly anticipated even by the Turner boomers.

There are other conditions that make for Republican success this year. The Roosevelt sentiment in Washington is overwhelming. No Republican objector to the state ticket has been found who fails to declare his allegiance to the National ticket. Unquestionably Roosevelt will bring out an overwhelming Republican vote. Were the issue submitted without argument this could not help but aid the Republican state ticket and to even increase the proportionate Republican majority.

Democrats Will Fight Roosevelt.

The Democrats will fight Roosevelt in this state. This much is conceded in the face of the cry of Republican boaters that this policy will weaken the Democratic state ticket. Politicians agree with such a declaration, for the constant attacks upon Roosevelt cannot but drive away some voters who, for party's sake, will not follow even a Turner leadership in state politics.

Turner is the Democracy's greatest card. And there are elements of great weakness about a pro-Turner fight. Mead has scarcely had a chance to meet the voters and the hysteria that followed the convention is already wearing off. All these circumstances make the cold-blooded analysis of the state vote appear to indicate even stronger that Democratic success is a remote possibility.

COON WILL NOT WITHDRAW.

Despite Effort of Senator Wilson to Force Him Off the Ticket.

SEATTLE, Wash., June 4.—(Special.)—An effort is being made to induce Charles E. Coon, of Port Townsend, to withdraw from the Republican ticket and give the position of Lieutenant-Governor to an Eastern Washington candidate.

The movement is being urged strongly by Wilson leaders, who hold a personal prejudice against Coon. They have prevailed upon State Chairman E. B. Palmer to summon Coon's friends from Port Townsend urge them to insist upon his withdrawal. Palmer, who is close to Wilson, has carried out the program faithfully and declares that he will call a meeting of the state committee within a few days to consider the matter.

The proposal that he withdraw from the ticket was submitted to Coon a few days ago and he refused to step aside. When this refusal was made known an ultimatum was delivered to him that in the event he refused to give up the place a fight would be made upon him, and if necessary bitter personalities drawn into the contest. It was represented that he could not be elected in such circumstances. Coon has remained firm, though the fight has made him ill.

A meeting of state candidates will be held on June 9 and it is likely a meeting of the state committee will be held about the same time. The proposal that Coon's place be given to another candidate will be brought up and discussed at that time.

The anxiety of the Wilson leaders to have Coon displaced is partially explained by the list of "available" candidates that have been suggested to the state chairman. The list includes H. D. Crow and David T. Ham, of Spokane, and Oliver Hall of Colfax, all strong Wilson supporters; John W. Aramsmith, who was Speaker of the House while Governor McGraw was Chief Executive, and E. C. Macdonald, who was McGraw's private secretary. Any one of these men would be more friendly to King County and undoubtedly to Wilson than Coon.

Why vote for "Tom" Worl? You don't know him. His name is not on the tax roll. You had not heard of him six months ago.

Vote for James M. Stott.

ENGINEER TAKES THE BLAME

Admits He Forgot Orders, and Thus Caused Train Collision.

KANSAS CITY, June 4.—None of the passengers injured in the head-on collision of the westbound Colorado flyer on the Missouri Pacific and the Hoisington accommodation, at Mastin, last night, was mortally hurt.

Engineer C. A. Sloum, of the flyer, admitted today that he was responsible for the wreck. He said he had forgotten his orders to meet the accommodation at Mastin. The accommodation was late, and the flyer went past.

Inside the passenger cars there was a scene of confusion. Travelers had been thrown from one end to another; some lay unconscious on the bedding on the floor. Dr. Work of Pueblo, who was on the train going home, took charge of them. He ordered the sleeping car prepared for the injured. The Pullman conductor refused. The doctor said: "You must make these beds." The conductor finally consented to the use of the sleeping car. Dr. Work took the sheets and pillowcases and tore them up for bandages.

Wrecking crews did not reach the scene with physicians until five hours after the wreck occurred. Several of the injured were brought to Kansas City, but a majority of those on the flyer continued on their trip West.

The dead:

AUGUST BLOOM, Clear Lake, S. D., stealing a ride on blind baggage.

The injured:

C. A. Sloum, engineer of flyer, Kansas City, leg broken, head on flyer, Kansas City, head cut, badly bruised.

E. W. Ford, porter, head bruised.

C. Conklin, Kansas City, fireman on train 36, hand mangled.

Mrs. John Robinson, Baltimore, leg mangled.

D. A. Ellwell, Oswatimie, Kan., engineer train No. 36, condition serious, probably injured internally.

John Furness, conductor train No. 36, badly bruised.

M. J. Blasbaig, Kansas City, head cut, badly bruised.

W. J. Forn, Oswatimie, Kan., head severely cut.

L. J. Slick, Kansas City, leg sprained.

Henry Casselbunn, New York City, nose broken.

Dala Lucas, mail clerk on flyer, body bruised.

Frank Lunk, Kansas City, shoulder bruised.

Ernest Palmer, Los Angeles, Cal., body bruised.

Louise Palmer, Kansas City, head bruised.

W. J. McLaughlin, Pueblo, Colo., head bruised, knee hurt.

William Nicholas, Port Douglas, Utah, right side bruised.

Mrs. Mary Kittler, Portland, Or., knee bruised.

Miles Posten, Boston, left knee bruised.

10 UNDER RUINS

Eleven-Story Distillery Wrecked.

FIRE AT ONCE BREAKS OUT

Warehouse Is Instantly a Seething Cauldron.

WHISKY FLOWS IN RIVERS

Cattleyards Near By Are Soon Abjaze, and 3200 Steers Are Burned to Death—Loss Will Be $1,000,000.

PEORIA, Ill., June 4.—An explosion which occurred in the 11-story warehouse of the Corning Distillery Company this afternoon completely wrecked the building. The ruins immediately took fire and communicated to three adjoining buildings which were burned to the ground. Ten men were buried beneath the ruins and burned to death. Six others were seriously injured. The loss on buildings and whisky and spirits stored will approximate $1,000,000.

At 7 o'clock tonight the fire had spread to the stockyards district, where a dozen large cattle barns filled with cattle for market were burned. The missing:

FRED K. KNOLL.

LOUIS BEHREND.

JOE ZIMMERMAN.

JOHN HOEBERKER.

LOUIS SAX.

WILLIAM FINLEY, JR.

E. BROWN.

M. CROWL.

JOHN LEPPIN.

WILLIAM FINLEY.

The injured—Adam Werner, Edward Werner, Elmer Hogan, J. B. Marshall, James M. Miller, Albie Feisberg.

A Seething Cauldron.

The warehouse, containing in the neighborhood of 30,000 barrels of whisky, was instantly a seething cauldron, and it was known that no one inside the big structure could live a moment. The warehouse, in crushing the smaller structure near by, set that on fire, and the whisky from the bursting barrels flooded everything in that section. Large streams ran toward the river, and in a short time there was a foot of whisky in the cattle pens and the streets. It was burning furiously, and the cries of the 2000 steers, confined there, were pitiable to hear. Their distress lasted but a few moments, however, for they were soon dead, either roasted or suffocated by the fumes.

The two fermenting houses were speedily destroyed. The flames threatened the mill and elevator just across the track, where the costly machinery is installed. However, the firemen made a winning fight here, and at 7 o'clock the fire seemed under control.

Carried by Stream of Whisky.

Elmer Hogan was at work in the warehouse when the collapse came. He was washed out through a break in the building by the big stream of whisky, and carried toward the river a distance of nearly 75 feet before being lodged against a fence, from which he managed to escape before the fire overtook him. He was so badly injured that he cannot recover.

Fred Knoll and William Finley, who had charge of the men employed in this district, had just left the building when the explosion and collapse came. Knoll was crushed to the earth, and almost instantly the place where he had fallen was enveloped in flames.

It is believed the Government men all escaped. The gaugers, 15 of whom were killed at the warehouse, had completed their work and gone about 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There were three Government storekeepers in the building, but it is reported all of them got out safe.

Warehouse No. 4, where the explosion occurred that did the damage, was an 11-story frame structure covered with corrugated iron. It was more than 100,000 feet in dimensions.

Warehouse A was a three-story brick building 100,000 feet. It contained in the neighborhood of 50,000 gallons of spirits. At midnight the ruins are still blazing and it will probably be two or three days before the flames are entirely exhausted.

The fact that every bit of inflammable material was thoroughly saturated with the escaping liquor makes it almost impossible to extinguish the blaze until all the wood has been burned. Firemen kept at least 40 streams of water playing on the ruins, but it had little effect.

In the cattle barns the bodies of about 3200 head of cattle. Practically all the cattle met death so suddenly that they did not move out of their tracks. As the torrent of burning liquor rushed down hill and enveloped the barn, it divided itself into numerous branches which flowed down the aisles and caused the instant death of every animal with which it came in contact.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Descendant of William Penn.

NEW YORK, June 4.—Mrs. Polk, mother of the Baroness de Charette, is dead at Cannes, says a Herald dispatch from Paris. She was a descendant of William Penn, founder of Pennsylvania, and A. Polk, who fought in the Southern army in the War of Secession. After peace was made he retired to Switzerland, where he died in 1857.
