

THIEVES ARE ACTIVE

Many Burglaries and Hold-Ups Recently Reported.

FEW OF CULPRITS CAUGHT

Criminals Grow Increasingly Bold as Summer Progresses, and Street-Car Robbery on Portland Heights Marks Climax.

In spite of patrolmen and detectives, the reign of terror, instituted by thugs and hold-up men, continues. Since July 4 there has been an average of one crime per night, including the holding up of individuals and street-cars, the burglary of residences and business houses, pickpocketing, raids on toolboxes and almost every known kind of theft. But few of the guilty persons have been arrested, and the list of suspects picked up is exceedingly small. The citizens seemed to have been reached Friday night and yesterday morning, when the Portland Heights car was held up and five burglaries were reported to the Police Department. On each case detectives and officers have been detailed, but actual results are wanting. Whether the conglomeration of thugs, pickpockets, hold-up men and highwaymen is composed of expert crooks, of ex-gamblers or of men new in the business, is still a matter of conjecture with the police, and in the meantime the robberies continue.

The reign of terror was properly inaugurated on the glorious Fourth. The list of crimes from that day to date is surprisingly long. Since that time three hold-up men have been held up by highwaymen and people have been accosted by thugs in all parts of the city. The center of the town has proved no safer than the darkest spot in the suburbs.

A partial list of the crimes from July 4 to date is as follows:

- July 4, E. S. Young, room on steamer in Cummings entered and gold watch and jewelry taken.
- July 4, J. Clark's room entered, watch taken.
- July 4, Miss Rinser, 333 East Washington street, bracelet stolen.
- July 6, Roosevelt saloon, Sixth and Duane streets, entered and quantity of liquor taken.
- July 7, J. L. Shambrook lost $40 by pickpocket in saloon.
- July 9, room of heliboy at Imperial Hotel entered, trousers and jewelry taken; thief arrested.
- July 10, Peter Leony held up on Burnside-street bridge, $5 taken.
- July 11, Henry Miler robbed of $50 by partner in Eugene Exchange saloon.
- July 13, Harry McGowan and wife held up, $5 taken.
- July 13, street-car held up near St. Vincent's Hospital and $30 taken from conductor.
- July 17, Paul Weesinger's residence ransacked during family's absence; three men arrested and bound over for crime.
- July 18, W. W. Clagett, of Albina, $30 worth of tools stolen.
- July 23, G. W. Clagett, 41 Florence avenue, $15 worth of tools stolen.
- July 25, J. E. Salterbeck has watch taken by pickpocket on Duane street.
- July 25, J. R. Shea, 652 Gilliam street, residence burglarized, 20 cents taken.
- July 25, residence of J. Griffith, next door to Mr. Eber's, entered and $12 stolen by burglar.
- July 25, Mrs. Minnie Switzer, 294 Clay street, house entered and jewelry stolen.
- July 25, J. H. Salterbeck has watch taken by pickpocket in front of Orpheum Theater.
- August 2, William Withwell's residence, 25 North Hoyt street, entered and $13 taken.
- August 3, street-car held up on Willamette Heights line, $25 taken.
- August 3, Ferdinand Nelson held up at Eleventh and Hoyt streets and relieved of $5.
- August 4, G. A. Stevens, of Albina, tools valued at $50 stolen.
- August 4, Portland Heights car held up on curve at head of Carter street, passengers terrorized and conductor and motorman relieved of $3.
- August 4, residence of W. T. Ferry, 381 East Second street, entered and $10 taken.
- August 4, grocery store of Charles Hoffend, 103 Corbett street, entered, but burglars got no money.
- August 4, butcher shop of J. Kurath, 700 Corbett street, $2 taken from cash register.
- August 6, Mrs. C. H. Abby, 254 First street, watch taken from room.
- August 6, attempt made to enter house at Thirty-first and East Pine streets; burglar frightened away.

In the majority of cases the amount obtained by burglars has been small, but the robbery of Mr. Ferry's residence early yesterday morning netted the thieves a larger amount than they have obtained in any other hold-up. The crook who robbed Mr. Ferry was evidently the same man who has entered other residences, as he employed exactly the same means. He gained entrance to the house through the bedroom of the little daughter of Mr. Ferry, and from the room passed through the hall into the other parts of the residence. He used a ladder in reaching the second-story window.

ESCAPED IGNOBLE DEATH.

Thugs Who Held Up Street-Car Were Nearly Massacred.

Some interesting sightings were cast yesterday upon the stirring hold-up of a Portland Heights street-car Friday night. Neither of the two nifty thugs are probably aware that they escaped an ignoble death at the hands of aroused residents of the vicinity.

The ignoble death that came so near to being meted out to the ungalant vagabonds was stored in a double-barreled shotgun belonging to C. W. Nottingham. This formidable weapon was in the hands of Lloyd Smith, paying-teller of the Oregon Savings Bank, who lives in the immediate vicinity of the hold-up. Mr. Smith was attracted from his home by the shooting and emerged in time to see one of the robbers prosomnolent through the car with a section of light artillery in his right hand. Mr. Smith ran toward the scene of action, only to be rudely halted by the inside bandit's pal on the outside of the car. The bandit requested him to execute a rear movement, which order was obeyed without reluctance. Mr. Smith retreated to the Nottingham domicile and borrowed some artillery. Thus reinforced, he advanced to the car. Nearing the vicinity once more, he saw that the status of affairs had altered. The robbers had departed from the car and a coming fight for him was one of the mercenary wretches, running for all he was worth.

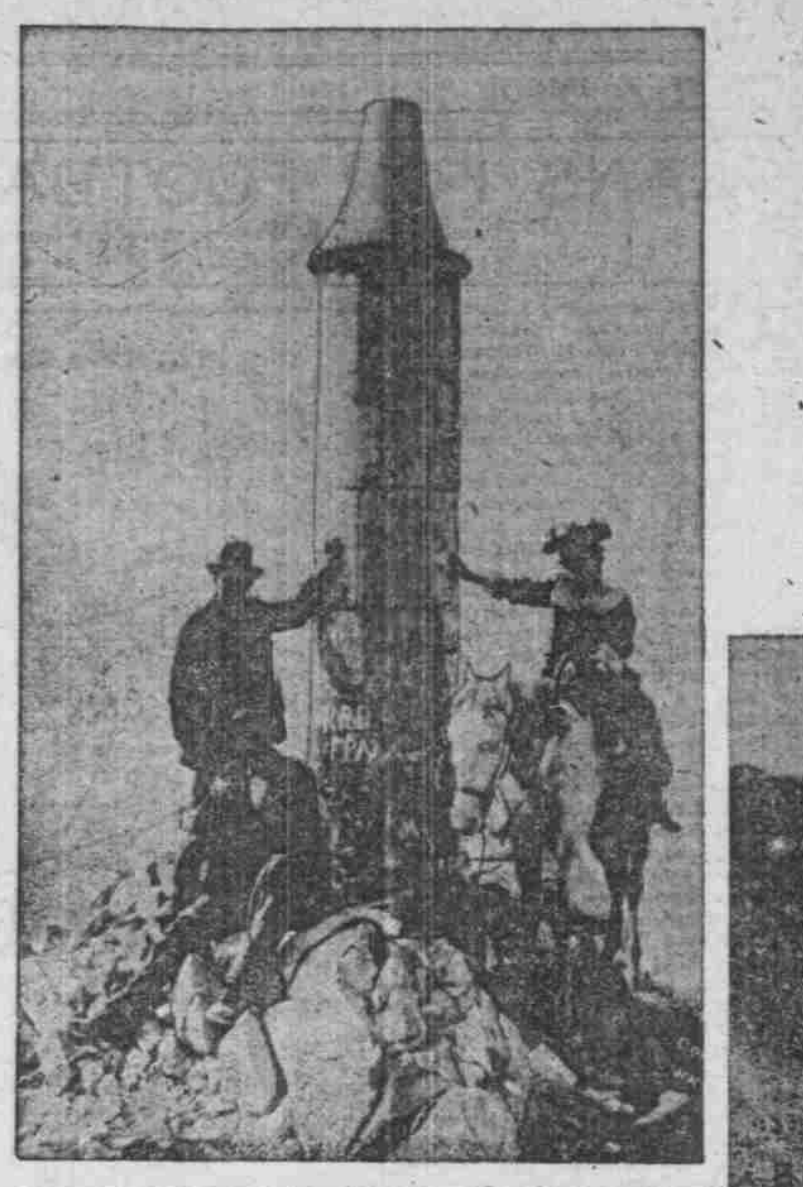

"Throw your hands up, or you're a dead one," commanded the gallant wielder of the bird gun as he drew the yawning muzzle of his weapon in line with the bandit's head.

There was a yell of terror in response that echoed through the surrounding hills and woods like the scream of a locomotive.

"My name's Johnson. I'm trying to get away from 'em—I'm no robber. Don't shoot!" shouted the fleeing man, all in one breath, and the gun was lowered.

Further reticence in the form of Blaise Laible and a revolver of questionable ancestry coming to Smith's succor, a determined search of the vicinity was

PHOTOGRAPHS OF THE HORSE THAT CLIMBED MT. SHASTA

A. K. Rosenbaum, Southern Pacific agent at Shasta Retreat, Cal., sends to The Oregonian pictures of the horse which climbed Mount Shasta. Mr. Rosenbaum writes: "I made in the papers published by you of which I am a constant subscriber, the many articles on the Mount Shasta climb. I have been at this place five seasons for the Southern Pacific Company, as agent, and have interviewed many of those climbing Shasta; have also seen the horse that reached the summit last August, and know the members of the party. The lady, while she reached the summit, did not ride all the way, but climbed and was assisted by the men. The horse, however, reached the summit, and the lady was placed on his back there and the photograph taken. This was done on different occasions. On the first they reached the summit, but the photographs did not turn out well, so another attempt was made. It was a very difficult trip for the horse to make, and he showed the effects of it for months afterward."

SPECIAL TRAINS GALORE

ARMY OF KNIGHTS TEMPLAR TO PASS THROUGH PORTLAND.

Local Commandery is Preparing to Entertain Visitors En Route to Encampment.

From August 25 to September 4, and from Monday, September 13, for about two weeks, the Portland Commandery of the Knights Templar will keep open house at the parlors of the Portland Hotel, in honor of the visiting Knights and their ladies, who will pass through Portland en route to the Triennial Convocation of the Knights Templar, which will be held in San Francisco during the first week of September.

The Oregon Commandery, No. 1, is making great preparations for the entertainment of the visitors. It is estimated that more than 20,000 Knights will visit for a shorter or a longer time in Portland while on their way to the Golden Gate city.

A committee has been at work for several weeks on the plans for the entertainment, and already several thousand dollars have been raised for the entertainment of the visitors.

The parlors of the Portland have been reserved for the visitors all during the time that the trains will be passing through the city, and committees from the Portland Commandery will be present at the depot to meet the incoming Knights and show them to the hotel, and to aid in escorting them over the city and in pointing out to them the principal sights to be seen. Most of the trains that will come have already planned in advance just what the passengers will do in each place, and the Portland hosts will act more as guides in pointing out the things that the guests have determined to see.

Henry Bates Stoddard, the grand master of the Knights Templar of the United States, will visit Portland and will perhaps lead the list of the guests, as the Grand Encampment Special, on which he is company with other of the officers of the grand encampment will travel, will reach Portland on Friday, August 26, at 7 in the morning, and will leave at 4 o'clock in the evening.

Right Eminent Sir George Mayhew Moulton, the deputy grand master, will also visit Portland during the passage of his train through the city. Mr. Moulton will in all probability be the next grand master of the Knights.

The Denver Commandery will pay Portland the longest visit and will reach the city on the morning of September 1 at 5:30 o'clock. A steamer has been chartered for The Dalles, and early in the morning the members of the Denver party will leave for a trip up the Columbia.

The meeting begins at 4:30 and is free for men only.

AT THE Y. M. C. A. TODAY.

Bishop Earl Cranston and the Clariflin Glee Club.

Bishop Earl Cranston of the Methodist church and the Clariflin University Glee Club will make up the programme at the men's meeting at the Young Men's Christian Association this afternoon. Bishop Cranston will speak especially to young men.

The Jubilee Singers are a quintet of colored young men, students at the University of Chicago. They have been touring the country, giving concerts from the Atlantic Coast to the Pacific under the direction of their president, Dr. Danton. Two or three concerts have been given in Portland and large audiences have been delighted with the fine voices and musical abilities of the singers. The meeting begins at 4:30 and is free for men only.

MR. C. E. WARRENS.

The well-known life insurance man, has recently been appointed agency director of the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company's Pacific Coast agency, with headquarters at Portland. Mr. Warren was formerly cashier of this company and states that among his reasons for returning to his ranks are that it is one of the oldest and strongest companies and operates under the famous insurance laws of Massachusetts, and its contracts have more beneficial terms than any other. One particularly desirable feature that appealed to him is the annual dividend, the reduction of premiums or to increase the amount insured. This is especially a policy-holder's company, and Mr. Warren decided that in presenting the subject to his friends he could best serve them by representing this company. The manager, Mr. H. G. Colton, is much pleased to have Mr. Warren back with him.

BROKEN AXLE NEARLY CAUSES SERIOUS ACCIDENT.

Rumor That 40 Persons Had Plunged Through Morrison Bridge Causes Much Excitement.

A broken front axle caused Brooklyn car No. 30, of the City & Suburban Railway Company, going east, to jump the tracks on the Morrison bridge, yesterday evening, and plunge into the sidewalk in front of H. Baumer's store, on the south side of the street, between Duane and Union avenues, yesterday evening. The car was moving at an ordinary rate of speed between East Third street and Union avenue, when the axle on the south side of the front axle gave way, which caused the car to make a complete circle, so that the front end struck the sidewalk in front of Mr. Baumer's store with such force as to scatter the building to shreds from top to bottom. The front trucks were pushed up on the walk, but here fortunately the car came to a stop.

Mr. Baumer and his clerks, who were sitting on the sidewalk, were sitting outside, as the car was a combination car, part being closed and part open. Miss Blauk was thrown off with great force on her legs, and she was injured. Mrs. Wea was shaken up, but at the time did not think she was hurt. Mrs. Fluke received some bruises. The women were taken into Mr. Baumer's store for a short time, and were there to take the car for their homes.

In the course of an hour the disabled car was gotten back on the track and out of the way of traffic, which had been interrupted. It was an accident for which no one was to blame in any way. There were about ten passengers on the car, and none but the driver and Mrs. Fluke were injured. All were badly frightened, as when the car started on the circle toward the Baumer store they did not know that it would not plunge through the sidewalk into the street about 20 feet below. The car struck the walk with such force that the boards and timbers were considerably smashed up.

An emergency meeting was called on the accident to the Brooklyn car, spread over the city like a flash yesterday afternoon. In the downtown district it was reported suddenly that a street-car had plunged through the Morrison-street bridge into the cold waters of the Willamette, and that at least 40 people had met death like rats in a trap. Down Alder and Morrison streets rumors were spread that the car had started to run, other men saw them running and joined in the procession.

"What's the matter?" inquired the people along the street.

"Car through the bridge," gasped the hurrying throng.

Clerks forgot that they were selling goods, customers forgot that they were making purchases, black drivers urged their horses into a gallop, automobiles exceeded the speed limit and were not stopped by policemen, who were doing a little extra duty. Firemen wondered if there was a fire and they were not in it. Street-car men wished they were going the other way.

The first crowd to reach the wharf at the foot of Alder street, were the river-ripping as usual. There were no heart-rending shrieks, no rowboats to the rescue, no cries of "Save the children." Cars were running over the bridge as on any other day. And suddenly it came to the mind of the multitude that they had been stung.

The Morrison-street bridge, but it had gone on to Mount Tabor and went over the end of the bridge instead of the side. The crowd was so excited that it was gaping hole in the trestle-work. Cars were running over the bridge as on any other day. And suddenly it came to the mind of the multitude that they had been stung.

Oregon will also be well represented in California. Already sufficient people have signified their intention of going on the trip to call for the chartering of four cars from this city alone. The Portland Commandery, Grant's Pass and Salem, Albany and Eugene have also chartered cars and will leave on September 3 for San Francisco. More than 100 of the Knights of Oregon will attend the convocation, but many of them will take with their wives, so that the number will be nearly doubled.

San Francisco is making great preparations for the entertainment of the convocation, which will bring together more people than any gathering of the year, with the single exception of the St. Louis Fair. In San Francisco a single convocation for 20,000 Knights will be held for the illumination of 10 blocks on Market street. Besides this a vast sum will be spent in the decorations of the Palace Hotel, which will be the headquarters of the delegates to the convocation. Altogether the decorations and illuminations will cost the San Francisco Knights more than $100,000, and the city will be free to the visitors during their stay, as they will be the guests of the San Francisco Knights.

NEW VERSION OF ACCIDENT.

PORTLAND, Aug. 6.—(To the Editor.)

My Automobile saleroom and machine shop Saturday evening there was an automobile connected with the accident that occurred. Not 5 cents' worth of property was destroyed, and nothing was injured in any wise in the calamity that cost my brother his life, and the accounts published concerning that disaster, in which it was stated that an explosion had taken place, were incorrect from first to last and from beginning to end. My brother was testing an auto igniter on a small pressure tank in the machine shop. This tank is in no way connected with an automobile, but is especially arranged for the purpose of which it was being used, and contained perhaps two quarts of gasoline, under about 20 pounds air pressure. My brother evidently intended to remove a regulating valve beyond the cut-off, which could have been done safely under any circumstances, but instead, for some unaccountable reason, removed the cut-off valve under pressure. This caused the gasoline to flow out of the trolley, and covering this city is of itself worth a trip across the continent. I carried back when I was here last year a most delightful impression of Portland, on account of a hurried run up Portland Heights, Willamette Heights, to Mount Tabor and other points—then the beautiful river rides on the Willamette, and that climax of river trips anywhere in the United States, a ride on the Columbia.

The places in which to hold receptions is one of the features that both the business men of most cities. Here the Portland Commandery fills this long, light and airy building with a splendid reception, the spacious apartments of this club can be visited by from 2000 to 3000 persons an hour in perfect comfort.

Conventions are not held entirely from the standpoint of the business they have in charge—delegates are anxious to study local institutions. Portland offers a number of theaters and side attractions that will interest many visitors; her churches are equal to the best; her fine public school buildings, public library, city hall with its museum, and grandest of all, the beautiful hillside homes, unmatched anywhere else in the country—all form an inducement for conventions to come to Portland.

The City Park, to my mind the most unique public playground in America, is open to the visitor and from its splendid height affords an opportunity for the lover of nature to view a panorama covering city, lake, mountain, valley and river, incomparable in this country.

Portland as Convention City

Reasons Advanced by Manager of Commercial Club.

(Tom Richardson, manager of Portland Commercial Club, in Lewis and Clark Journal.)

You ask me the question, "Why should Portland be selected as a place in which to hold conventions?" and I take pleasure in replying:

The hotel situation is of the utmost importance, and without going into details I can truthfully say that both for those who are economically inclined, as well as the other class, who desire the best and are willing to pay for it, Portland is fully equal to the cities of the Pacific Northwest. The city is well provided with halls in which to hold conventions.

Now, put yourself into the position of a delegate to a convention, in a distant city, and in addition to the interest you would have in the proceedings of the convention, your first thought would be that you would like to see the city and its environs thoroughly, and if you could make your choice you would prefer that the convention should be held in some section of the country that you had not visited. Portland, as the metropolis and the largest city of the Pacific Northwest, is in a portion of the United States which is yet to receive a visit from many millions of our people.

The city meets the requirements of the delegates in that it is a splendid system of trolley lines, which not only covers the city but all the surrounding territory, and as a large portion of the American people live where there are no hills, a view from the trolley car covering this city is of itself worth a trip across the continent. I carried back when I was here last year a most delightful impression of Portland, on account of a hurried run up Portland Heights, Willamette Heights, to Mount Tabor and other points—then the beautiful river rides on the Willamette, and that climax of river trips anywhere in the United States, a ride on the Columbia.

Portland's pseudonym is "The City of Roses," and here are produced the world's finest specimens. This is not a mere figure of speech, for Portland's growers excel the productions of King Edward's world-renowned flower gardens. In cherries, strawberries, blackberries, apples, prunes, Oregon stands at the top. One visitor going through this state have been brought back merely through eating our Royal Anne cherries.

Understand, I am answering your question, "Why should Portland be selected as a place in which to hold conventions?" and not trying to tell anything about the benefits that will accrue to this city and state. A delegate attending a convention in this city can at small expense of time and money, see the Willamette Valley, which is unequalled anywhere in the richness of its soil, while from the standpoint of natural beauty it is equalled by but few of the famous valleys of the world.

The beautiful Pacific, the world's greatest ocean, can be reached from Portland, either by rail or boat, inside of 100 miles, where surf bathing and other seaside amusements can be enjoyed.

Portland is easily the most delightful city in America in which to spend the Summer—the climate here from June 1 to October 31 approaches perfection. The city is a beautiful city of the world, with its mountains, grass, seas and other vermin.

The man or woman who loves mountain-climbing can find every opportunity to enjoy this exhilarating pastime. A solo climber can be enjoyed here, or take a trolley car in the business center and in 15 minutes be lost to the busy world in the midst of a primeval forest.

Portland affords a splendid opportunity to study the financial, commercial and industrial conditions in the great Pacific Northwest. This city is very decidedly the center of this portion of the United States in actual business of the world.

Portland is a city of the future, with its factories, mills, wholesale houses, factories, and this is the home of the men who own and control the destinies of the Pacific Northwest. The man or woman who is interested in the future of the Pacific Northwest will go back home a better man.

At the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition and Oriental Fair there will be gathered all that is choicest in the foreign and American exhibits at St. Louis. There will be a showing of the products of the Pacific Coast, Alaska, and this great Northwest country that will be beyond the expectations of both the visitor and of our home people—but I leave the subject of this fair for you to treat in other columns of your splendid publication.

I have only begun to answer your question, "Why should Portland be selected as a place in which to hold conventions?" There are hundreds of other good reasons, and one that is greater than all I have mentioned is that a splendid, wholehearted Westerner welcome awaits not only the delegates to conventions, the visitors and the homeseeker, but all who care to enjoy the beauties of the Pacific Northwest, even temporarily, within the confines of Oregon's metropolis.

"Twentieth Century?" asked the man behind the soda water counter. The elderly customer nodded affirmatively. "The clerk poured a little lemon syrup into the glass, then filled it almost full with maited milk, broke two eggs on top of this and gave the mess a vigorous shake, after which he filled the glass with soda. The check was for 20 cents to say something, but Brown uttered quickly in an undertone:

"Hush, not here! Move along and I will follow. I want to help you if I can."

And before Brown knew what he was doing he had both hands upon the other's shoulders and was lock-stepping with him away from the drive toward a sequestered part of the park.
