Statuary Costing $2,500,000 Will Adorn the Lewis and Clark Exposition Grounds

VIEW OF STATUARY LOOKING TOWARD PALACE OF EDUCATION

PIONEER SEEKING SHELTER

BUFFALO KILLING MOUNTAIN LION

THE past week has been productive of two events of the greatest moment to the Exposition. Of greatest importance was the completion of the buildings and next is the contribution to the Exposition of statuary valued at approximately $2,500,000. This magnificent gift was made by the St. Louis Exposition, and includes the cream of the St. Louis statuary. Among the number selected by Oscar Huber, director of works, who went to St. Louis for that purpose, are representative works of some of the great sculptors and the placing of these works of statuary art about the grounds will add an element of beauty to the Exposition that nothing else could give.

Notable among the sculptors whose works are represented are Borglum, Vaudell, Frederic Remington, Weinman, Bitner, Lopez and Ruckstuhl. In selecting statues the idea was kept in mind of getting only such as harmonize with the Portland World's Fair. Western types are largely shown, the cowboy, pioneer, Indian and buffalo figuring in several groups.

One of the cowboy groups will probably be placed at the main entrance directly in front of the Colonnades. This group is by Remington and shows four cowboys indulging in a little Western recreation. The statue is done in staff, but before being placed will receive a covering of bronze.

Among the other statues are: Group of Buffalo, Resting Cowboy, Step to Civilization, Destiny of the Red Man, Sioux Chief, Cherokee Chief, Four Neptunes, Captain Merritt, Lewis and Clark, Thomas Jefferson, Daniel Boone, Pioneer Seeking Shelter, Buffalo Dance. Twelve stately carved urns are also included in the list. These will be placed in the natural park and agricultural gardens.

Forty per cent of the space has been reserved for Oregon. With these additional buildings finished the exhibits department will be able to carry out the original idea of storing all early commissions in exactly the same place they will be opened for exhibition later. Thus the placing of exhibits can be effected in the Spring without the slightest confusion. This rule can be carried out in nearly every department, as the Liberal Arts and Foreign Exhibits buildings were completed some time ago and the Forestry building will soon be done. The exceptions will be the Mining and Machinery buildings, which will need 60 more days' work before being in readiness for use.

In Exposition circles it is generally conceded that the early completion of so many buildings speaks volumes for the success of the Exposition and sets aside all doubt as to whether the Fair will be ready by June 1.

The plans of the educational department were completed yesterday by General Supervisor R. F. Robinson and the advisory board, composed of Superintendents J. H. Ackerman, Frank Rigler and J. A. Church. When submitted to the State Commission, the plans were promptly approved. It was decided to organize the state by counties, making each county an exhibit unit, although cities that so desire may make separate exhibits.

The work will be arranged by grades, commencing with the primary and ending with the High School. This plan, it is argued, will enable people to understand the educational work of the state in the order of its development.

Supervisor Robinson will issue circulars on the subject for general distribution among the schools in the near future. Several schools are reported as having already arranged for exhibit space, among these being the University of Oregon, State Agricultural College and the Monmouth Normal School.

A special freight rate has been allowed the Lewis and Clark Exposition by the transcontinental freight bureau at Chicago. President Goodie, who lately went to Chicago to arrange the matter, wired yesterday a rate of 60 cents per 100 pounds had been allowed for exhibits in carloads, minimum 20,000 pounds. The commodities included in this allowance are horticulture, agriculture, fossils and cereals, building materials, such as granite, marble, slate, brick and terra cotta, maps, statistics, drawings, photographs.

Artist Made Mistake.
The cover of a very pretty little souvenir lately gotten out here, and containing views of Portland and glimpses of Oregon scenery, is decorated by a colored picture of a spray of foliage of the "Oregon grape," the leaves showing all the glowing red, bronze and yellow tints of Autumn. This has been much admired as a work of art, but alas! the artist made a mistake by placing at the base of the stem a cluster of red berries representing the fruit of the plant. The mistake is not palpable to strangers, but every Oregonian, who knows that the fruit of the Oregon grape is a spike of dark purple berries resembling small grapes, growing at the end of the spray of leaves, smiles as he looks at the brilliant picture, and considers it a joke on the artist, who, however, may consider that his scheme of foliage for the plant is more artistic than Nature's.

SUNDAY IN THE CHURCHES

The six Exposition structures which were completed Thursday were accepted at a special meeting of the Lewis and Clark Commission yesterday morning. Prior to the meeting President Myers and the building committee made a thorough investigation of the present condition of the finished structures which were built by J. E. Bennett and found everything satisfactory, with the exception of changes in the flooring of the Agricultural Palace, where numerous knots were noticed.

Secretary E. C. Giltner was instructed to draw up vouchers for the final payments, holding back the one on the Agricultural Palace until sections of flooring have been changed.

The buildings completed are the Agricultural Palace, the Fire Department building, Public Comfort building, Administration building, Public Shelter tower and the Colonnade entrance. The Agricultural Palace is the largest and one of the finest appearing structures planned at the Exposition, although it will be closely rivaled by the main Government building on Guild's Lake. It will be used for the agricultural displays of such states and countries as do not have individual pavil-
